Mooney and Billings Denied Plea for Release

CALIFORNIA COURT VOTES SIX TO ONE AGAINST BOMBERS

Rejects Billings Appeal and Governor Will Act on Both Men According to Verdict.

TWO HAVE SERVED OVER 13 YEARS

Action Brings Into Limelight Again Preparedness Day Tragedy in San Francisco in 1916.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 4.—(AP) Independence Day brought another defeat to Warren K. Billings and Thomas J. Mooney in their long fight for freedom from life sentences imposed for the 1916 San Francisco preparedness day bombing which killed ten persons and injured 40.

The state supreme court, in a report made public today, voted six to one against recommending to Governor C. O. Young that Billings be pardoned. The governor repeatedly has said his action on Mooney's pardon plea would be guided by the recommendation in Billings' case.

Governor Young is expected to make his decision on both the Billings and Mooney pleas next week.

The adverse report brought a smile from Mooney at San Quentin prison.

"The fight is not yet over," the former labor leader commented. "It has been a long battle and I am never going to give up the attempt to prove my innocence."

Billings, at Folsom prison, had nothing to say, but Warden Court Smith remarked "naturally he was very disappointed."

Mooney and Billings long have contended they were convicted on perjured testimony, but the supreme court said there was no evidence supporting these charges. The majority believed Bilings had received a "fair and impartial trial."

"Upon the entire record before us," the court stated, "we acquit the then officials of San Francisco who were charged with the duties of discovering and bringing to trial and conviction the authors of this dastardly crime."

Billings' past and present affiliations make it "fairly inferable," the court said, that he was familiar with plots and plans of the bombing.

"This being so it is an almost irresistable conclusion that if Billings did not prepare and plant the deadly time bomb of the preparedness day disaster, he and his assistants and co-defendant Mooney knew and have always known who did prepare and plant that bomb and the deadly purpose for which it was prepared and planted."

Associate Justice Langdon dissented, saying "I am not so free from doubt of petitioner's guilt as to withhold a recommendation for executive clemency."

The decision added another disappointment to the many experienced by Mooney since February 10, 1917, when he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. Billings had received a life term.

Presidential intervention by Woodrow Wilson won a commutation from the governor of California for Mooney. Then the long campaign for pardon was started. Mooney's friends charged police were panic-stricken at inability to fix the crime on the perpetrators and manufactured evidence against the defendants.

Fifteen Balloons Float Over Texas

BELLEAIR SPEEDWAY, HOUSTON, Texas, July 4.—(AP)—Soaring along beneath a starlit sky, 15 balloons contesting in the national elimination balloon race tonight were headed northwestward propelled by a moderate breeze from the southeast.

The weather bureau deduced barring a change in wind they should pass over the Dallas-Fort Worth region around dawn. Three of the bags, not identified, passed over Huffsmith, Texas, 40 miles northwest of here at 9 p. m.

The 15 huge envelopes began taking off from here one by one shortly after 6 o'clock tonight. The two entrants traveling the furtherest will be declared eligible—along with Ward Van Orman—to represent the United States in the international race starting from Cleveland September 1. Van Orman automatically became the third United States representative by his victory in the international race last year.

Freed Prisoners May Be Rejailed

ATLANTA ENJOYS FOURTH OUTDOORS

Atlanta generally observed a sane, safe and pleasant Fourth of July, donning its summer clothes and hying forth in search of pleasure and amusement. In most cases it found what it sought, and, with ideal weather for the great national holiday, the day passed satisfactorily for all, with the prospect of a "tapering-off" holiday to follow today for many of them.

Four slight injuries from firecrackers, ten minor automobile accidents, without serious injuries to anybody involved, and forty drunks constituted the police record Friday.

Thousands jammed the Speedway, out Pace's Ferry road, and saw Ralph de Palma, veteran of the roaring road, drive his 2,015th race. Other thousands went to Lakewood, Grant and Piedmont parks, where picnickers dotted the greensward as far as eye could see. To those not of a rustic bent, the movies yawned a cool, shadowy greeting, and all theaters were packed to capacity.

Swimming Pools Popular.

Swimming pools throughout the city and its nearby environs were churned to a froth by the myriads of Atlantans, young and old, who elected to spend their part of the Fourth in the cooling waters of bathing resorts. The roads that lead from the city were threaded with automobilists during the afternoon and no serious mishaps were reported on the highways. It was an ideal holiday.

Lakewood, with what in all probability was its largest crowd—not barring even Southeastern Fair days—drew hordes of pleasure-seekers—a horde that later was chafed into a vast throng of booing, cat-calling people which went into one great razzberry chorus as a result of the manner in which the automobile racing events turned out.

Noticeably several notches higher in the social stratum than its usual patronage, the Fourth of July crowd at Lakewood jammed the grandstand and packed the areas around the race track.

From the first, early arrivals at the old amusement park were somewhat soured by the abrupt discovery that it would cost half a dollar a throw to gain mere entrance to the park—a fact unannounced previously. Hundreds turned back then and there, but other hundreds paid for the privilege of walking about inside the enclosure of the park.

Then the races were started after what seemed interminable delay. Sig Haughdahl, slated as the "southern dirt track champion," drove once and three-fourths around the mile track and shelved his racer, announcing a broken piston. Race Number 3 was entirely skipped. The racing machines were temperamental, refusing to run at all in many instances, and generally gumming up and slowing down all starts.

On top of that the "Mysterious Ellsworth," who was to drive a car off into the lake, blindfolded, according to the ballyhoo, became more mysterious and did a neat vanishing-American stunt, leaving "Father" Lumpkin to drive it in—a tame affair.

Senator Copeland Urges Dry Law Change

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—Delegation of authority over the liquor problem to the individual states was urged today by Senator Copeland, of New York, in an address at the Tammany Fourth of July celebration.

"There will not be contentment in the state of New York and in many other states," he said, "unless the constitution is so modified as to permit the state itself to determine what shall be its course in this particular matter."

New York, he continued, has the right "to settle a purely domestic matter as the overwhelming majority of its citizens desire it to be settled." He added that under no circumstances must the saloon be permitted to return.

"If we are chained to the cause of present-day prohibition," he said, "there must be found a way to break the chains. That must be done in the legal way, the constitutional way, granting the right and privilege to every state to choose for itself how this problem should be dealt with within its borders.

"New York has a right to say: 'We are dissatisfied with the present constitutional amendment and demand a revision of the constitution which will leave the state free to deal with the liquor problem as it chooses.'"

Callaway and Holloway Studying Legal Phases Connected With General Amnesty.

Action looking to the re-incarceration of a large number of city stockade prisoners released Thursday by the executive clemency of Alderman J. Allen Couch, mayor pro tem., who is under indictment for being interested in a city contract, on the ground that certain prisoners were not subject to receiving clemency, was being planned Friday by Police Recorder A. W. Callaway.

Judge Callaway said that he will ask City Attorney James L. Mayson for a ruling on the matter, and will then consider steps to undo what he termed an "imposition on society."

Recorder M. M. Holloway stated Friday night that he may take steps along a similar line. He said that he intended to call for a copy of the order issued by Alderman Couch and that he would give careful study to all phases of the situation. He expects to be able to make a statement covering his position on the matter early tonight.

Meanwhile, city officers recalled a feud between Ex-Mayor Jim Woodward and former Police Recorder Nash Broyles in which Judge Broyles began passing sentences of 29 days each in order to prevent Mayor Woodward from extending executive clemency to prisoners.

Judge Callaway said that under the law, the chief executive of the city may pardon prisoners serving 30 days or longer or subject to a $50 or higher fine, but that prisoners with lesser sentences must have a written recommendation from the recorder before obtaining clemency.

At least one white male prisoner and several negro prisoners were back in the city station house Friday afternoon following their release from the stockade. J. W. Duncan, a white man, was sentenced to pay a fine of $12 or serve 24 days on Thursday afternoon, but was released Thursday night with other stockade prisoners. Duncan was rearrested Friday at noon on a charge of being drunk on the street.

Police officers were confident Friday afternoon that a large number of those released under Couch's general amnesty order will be at the stockade again within the next few weeks. Many of those turned out of the city prison are old-timers, and frequently are in police court, they pointed out.

In looking over a list of white men released from the stockade, Lieutenant J. A. Scott said that practically every name on the list was familiar, and that nearly a dozen out of 60 had been "here hundreds of times." At the office of the matron of the white women's ward, it was said that at least a third of the women turned out were old offenders.

Neither Police Chief James L. Beavers nor Detective Chief A. Lamar Poole would comment on the stockade clearance, stating that they did not wish to criticize the acting mayor.

Discuss Council Action.

Several members of council conferred at the city hall Thursday night after the blanket amnesty had been granted by Acting Mayor Couch upon the question of taking the matter up when council meets Monday but, after some discussion, inclined to the opinion that any action would be futile.

"The matter of impeaching Couch was discussed," Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, one of the members in an informal conference said, "but I doubt, even if it could be accomplished, whether it would do any good. I think his action is very unusual, to say the least, and I questioned the legality of it but the prisoners are all out now."

Alderman Alvin L. Richards said that he would not have done the same thing had he been in the place of the acting mayor.

Alderman J. Charles Murphy, chairman of the police committee, said that he knew of no action that council could take in the matter.

"It is a crime," Alderman G. Everett Millican declared. "I tried to obtain an injunction against the pardon order but was advised through the city attorney's office I could not do so. I fear Couch has injured the persons he has liberated rather than benefited them."

Alderman Couch stated Friday night that he had been out of the city during the day but that before he left he had received a number of phone calls commending him for his action. He said that he did what he considered a charitable act, and one which was provided for under the law. "If the people of Atlanta," he said, "will give the unfortunates I released a helping hand I feel confident that good to the city will result. If only a part of those I freed go straight from now on, I shall feel that my action was perfectly justified."

Alderman Ben T. Huiet, of the third ward, who recently ran a strong but unsuccessful race for mayor, classed it as an imposition on society, and said that while no doubt the freeing of a number of prisoners was justified as their families needed them and their crimes had been minor ones, on the other hand there were

SEVEN ASPIRANTS FOR HIGH OFFICES OPEN CAMPAIGNS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Georgia's major political office seekers Friday to a man hit the trail which leads to either defeat or victory in the September primary.

Taking advantage of holiday gatherings in various parts of the state, the candidates from the United States senator race down, outlined hopes and aspirations, and advanced those theories which would in their opinions work for better government.

Only Senator William J. Harris was absent, but his speech was read by his brother, Peter C. Harris. Scheduled to speak at Neel Gap, in north Georgia, the senator was detained in Washington due to delay in passage of the veteran's relief measure. His opponent, John M. Slaton, at Bainbridge assailed the senior senator's record, however, and in other parts of the state all five candidates for governor spoke.

Both Harris and Slaton opened their speaking campaigns with their Independence Day addresses, but with a marked difference in method. Harris did not mention Slaton's name, while Slaton devoted much mention directly to his opponent, and said at one point:

"My declaration is: 'Let everybody who is satisfied with present conditions vote for Senator Harris!'"

The former governor said the main issues involved was the World Court, League of Nations, "white supremacy," as related to the failure of the senate to confirm Judge Parker of North Carolina as a member of the supreme court, the tariff, appropriations, and protection of the rights of the home.

Senator Harris in turn in his prepared address advanced his record in opposition to "entangling alliances," said he had always opposed unrestricted immigration, had fought for white supremacy, and was strongly opposed to the policy of using money as a means of winning elections.

From the governor's standpoint, John N. Holder, speaking at Homer, and George H. Carswell, sharing the platform with Slaton at Bainbridge, both opened their campaigns.

Holder, the former chairman of the state highway commission, advocated a gradual change in tax laws "until the ad valorem system for real estate can be abandoned," urged strengthening of the income tax law, better schools, "fair compensation" to farmers, a budget commission for regulating state departmental expenditures, reorganization of departments, and a continuation of the state highway system upon much the same lines as it is now being developed.

He also advocated reimbursement of counties the money paid out for state

Swimmin' Hole, Loved by Riley, Is Gone at Last

GREENFIELD, Ind., July 4.—(UN)—James Whitcomb Riley's old swimmin' hole is gone, just as he predicted in his famed poem:

"They was lots o' fun at the ol' swimmin' hole
But the lost joys is past. Let your tears in sorrow roll

Practical minded citizens, to whom "The Old Swimmin' Hole" is just a poem, dedicated in its place today a $30,000 bathing pool.

Where once "the bulrushes growed" along the Brandywine creek, was gleaming white tile. Where rose "the cat-tails so tall" was a row of dressing booths.

Bewhiskered Will Meek, 72 years old now, used to splash around in the ol' swimmin' hole with Riley when the latter was a freckled-faced youngster. Riley told about its joys in verse. Meek recalled its pleasures with wistful reminiscenses.

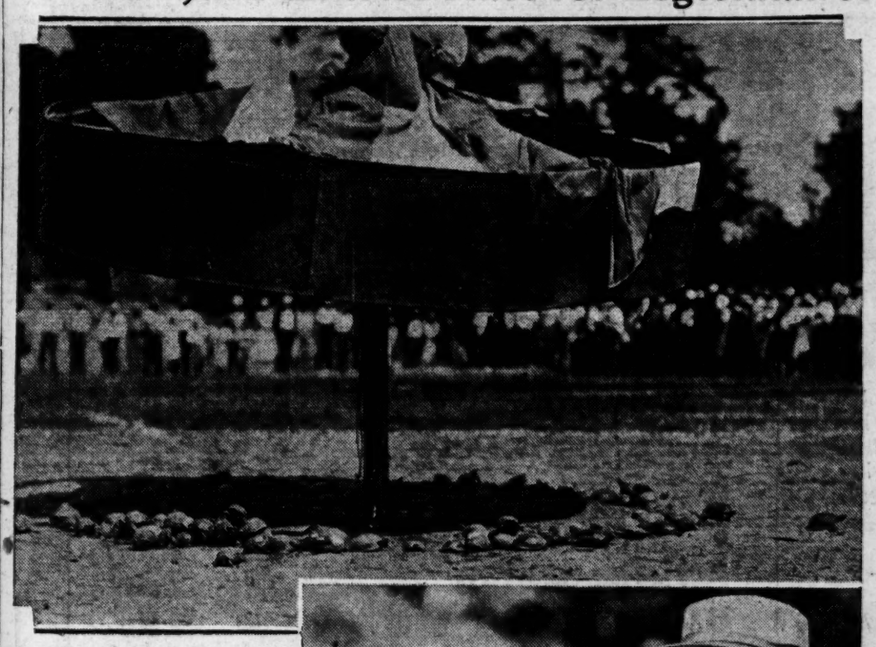

"We'd stay away all day," he said. "We'd throw mud at each other and tie knots in the clothes of the feller that was last in.

"And Jim Riley was just a real boy like the rest of us."

Meek smiled and quoted the rest of the poem:

"But them days is past and gone and old time's tuck his toll
The merry days of youth is beyond our control,

CAROL AND QUEEN REACH AGREEMENT

Official Circles Say Reconciliation Is All Arranged.

BY ALEXANDER HURTIG,
United News Correspondent.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 4.—Reconciliation between King Carol II, of Rumania, and his queen, Helene, was perfected today, following weeks of persuasion during which the former princess of Greece refused to take back her husband.

The reconciliation was reached through constant conferences and considerable pressure on Queen Helene, mother of their son, the boy Prince Michael, and the fact still was semi-private today.

It was expected the formal announcement of the reconciliation would be made next week, when King Carol also will seek to have their divorce annulled.

The report of the reconciliation, however, was published in the newspaper Lupta today and is generally, although not officially, known in Bucharest. King Carol, the newspaper said, recently has spent hours daily at Helene's palace with his son, Michael.

The queen and Michael were reported proceeding to the royal summer palace at Sinaia tomorrow, where Carol is to join them a week later.

The Lupta said the king intended to go ahead with the divorce annulment proceedings, legally restoring Helene as his wife as well as his queen on the throne of Rumania.

Thus, it was anticipated that within the next few days King Carol will have completed his brilliant coup d'etat in every phase of its ramifications. His reconciliation with the proud Princess Helene came far harder than his swift seizure of the throne.

For weeks since he flew into Bucharest from Paris and ousted the 9-year-old Michael, his son, from the throne, Carol's apparent aim has been to retrieve to himself his former wife's affections.

The king's former wife could not forget so easily, it appeared, the fact that Carol five years ago renounced her and his throne for the love of Mme. Magda Lupescu.

Reasons of state possibly as much as any other considerations were believed to have caused Helene to waver in her firm decision to remain aloof from the returned king—that and possibly the tie both found in their son, Crown Prince Michael.

BERLIN SAYS LUPESCU TO MEET KING.

BERLIN, July 4.—(AP)—A Bucharest dispatch printed in a Berlin newspaper today said that Mme. Magda Lupescu, the companion of King Carol II, when he was in exile, had arrived at the Rumanian royal summer residence at Sinaia.

The dispatch added that rooms had been reserved at the residence for Mme. Lupescu by King Carol, who was expected there tomorrow.

It also said that her arrival had caused a great sensation in Bucharest court and political circles, with much speculation as to what action, if any, would be taken by Queen Helen, Carol's divorced wife, with whom he has been reported near a reconciliation, and Queen Mother Marie.

BY GENE HINTON.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., July 4.—(Special.)—Gainesville went terrapin-minded today as several thousand citizens, including most of the American Legion contingent in session here, trouped to the Gainesville ball park and watched 1,000 of the sturdy little beasts, built for long service rather than speed, stage the first terrapin Derby ever held east of the Mississippi.

Traveling over the finish line—30 feet from the starting point—at a speed which sent him far ahead of his competitors, P. L. Anderson's entry won the first prize of $150. W. O. Henderson and E. H. Ashley watched their representatives take second and third place, respectively, and bring home prizes of $90 and $60.

Training methods employed by Mr. Anderson, vigorously defended by him as being thoroughly in keeping with the terrapin-racing code, brought down upon him a storm of criticism from the other contestants—principally because they didn't think of the scheme themselves. It seems that Mr. Anderson, familiar with the terrapin and his restive nature, kept his pride and joy confined in a small box for 10 days before the deroy, further irritating it by feeding it only on bread and water and very little of that. The result was that when he was given his first glimpse of the blue sky in nearly a fortnight he sold out from there, leaving his fellow-racers far in his wake.

One of the terrapins, essaying to negotiate a curve too rapidly, turned turtle, but handlers, rushing to his assistance, found him uninjured, though deeply chagrined.

Georgia Legionnaires made short shrift of business matters today, rushing through their two brief sessions that they might reach the terrapin course, and later, the flying field, where an aerial program kept them, along with several thousand townspeople, occupied during most of the afternoon. Tonight, at the Riverside Military Academy, a brilliant coronation ball proved one of the highlights of the three-day convention of the Georgia department of the national organization.

The meeting, in its third and final day Saturday, opened early today, with a parley breakfast by the Legion auxiliary. Officers and district committeewomen made short reports. The veterans opened their own session at 10 o'clock this morning, all business coming under the general classifications of "new" and "unfinished" being taken up. Music for the session was furnished by the 29th infantry band.

The Legion and its auxiliary held a joint session at 11:30 o'clock, Robert F. Smith, general manager of the American Legion Monthly, and Colonel Dallas B. Smith, of the United States veterans' bureau, delivering the principal addresses.

During the early afternoon a group of visiting Legionnaires, in memory of Roy Head, first soldier from White county to lose his life in the World War, made an automobile trip to Neel's Gap, laying a wreath en route on the Roy Head Memorial bridge. Head not only was the first White county citizen to die in combat in the war, but was the first Georgian to make the supreme sacrifice.

In addition to the air meet, which was started officially when four planes, competing in the Atlanta-to-Gainesville derby, arrived at the airport, afternoon entertainment included a luncheon, which was given by the local post to officers and distinguished guests, and a baseball game between Gainesville and the Atlanta All-Stars. Nobody seemed to know just how the game came out, but that it actually took place seems almost a certainty.

Following a band concert by the 29th infantry musicians tonight, a brilliant pyrotechnic display was carried out at the airport, providing an Independence Day climax to an extremely full 12-hour period.

Other speakers at today's business sessions included William Wolfe Smith, general counsel of the United States veterans' bureau; Watson B. Miller, chairman of the national rehabilitation committee which is handling more than 80,000 cases of former service men, and E. E. Cooke, past national vice commander.

Colonel J. Monroe Johnson, engineer officer of the Rainbow division during the World War, was introduced at one of the meetings today and is scheduled for an address tomorrow.

Saturday's program includes several business sessions and a number of entertainment features, for the Legionnaires in attendance as well as for the members of the body's auxiliary.

HEATING MOTOR ABRUPTLY ENDS RECORD FLIGHT

SKY HARBOR AIRPORT, CHICAGO, July 4.—(AP)—Twenty-three days from the June afternoon when they roared out of the dust at Sky Harbor—just a couple more would-be endurance fliers, unnoticed by anyone but a few mechanics—two Sparta, Ill., farm boys skimmed down into that same dust tonight to hear thousands hail them champions.

John and Kenneth Hunter had been in the air for 553 hours and 41 1-2 minutes, and even then they were willing to go on, but a clogged screen filter prevented their getting oil and they had to make a hurried landing, touching earth at 5:21:30, central standard time—more than 133 hours longer than the St. Louis Robin's previous record.

Crowd Rushes Field.

Their second-hand monoplane still was serving them well at the end and the motor still was droning out the monotone it had kept up through the long days and nights of flying in darkness and light, in fair weather, in wind and rain. But the frequent pouring of oil into the engine had clogged up the screen and, when the last contact was made, five minutes before landing, no oil would enter. There was no choice but to come down and they pulled away from the faithful Big Ben, the refueling ship piloted by Brothers Albert and Walter, and swung down to the field.

The holiday thousands, who packed the grounds back of the ropes, became excited. As the sturdy City of Chicago whirred to the hangar, ropes fell before their onrush and police were helpless to control them. So dense was the rushing mob that John, at the controls, had to do a ground loop to avoid hitting them. He taxied off again toward the hangar, with the milling thousands in pursuit. All around the ship they crushed, while observers for the National Aeronautical Association battered their way through to get the barograph.

A radio man managed to shove through the pack and hand a microphone into the plane, where the erstwhile coal miners called their "Hello, world—sorry we couldn't have stayed longer."

Disappointment to Fliers.

Newspaper reporters and cameramen were not so fortunate. They had no chance against that surging, hysterical throng. It was only by luck that the first "flash" telling of the landing was clicked over the special telegraph wires before the uncontrollable spectators managed to shove their way into the hangar and tear away the wires. They were speedily repaired and the harried writers were able to get their stories of the landing and the subsequent bedlam to the hundreds of waiting newspapers.

Ten minutes after the landing police managed to clear a path and drag the two fliers into an office, where they posed for pictures and had their first chance to relax.

Kenneth, oil-spattered, unshaven, but smiling, said it was a keen disappointment to have been forced

Getting Ready for the Picnic

BY JESSIE MARIE DeBOTH.

Picnics are always popular with children, and even adults admit their charm now that motoring is so general. So let us be ready for the summer outings, and plan for lunches that will be satisfying and not too laborious. It is easy enough for folks to say, "Oh, just fix up anything," but we housewives know that it is really easier to prepare a regular meal for the dining room than to pack a picnic lunch that pleases.

Those who can afford a special outfit find it easy enough, when a hamper with the needful dishes, silver, etc., is always ready for the food itself. The next best thing, however, is a complete list of what is needed, on a large card which will stand much handling. Keep it in a handy place and consult it carefully when packing the lunch; then there can be no sugarless coffee nor eggs without salt. Aluminum shakers are light and cheap and several small ones are better than a pair of big ones. Plates may be made of wood or paper, but the latter are now to be had so smooth and firm that they are really practical. Especial stress is placed on the compartment type of plate as it means fewer dishes and no unhappy mixing of flavors. Where a table is not available the best system is individual trays; light tin ones that cost little, last long and mean so much comfort. The best food loses its charm when eaten under difficulty. Paper cups answer well enough for cold drinks, but hot coffee tastes better in real cups, with handles. If you picnic often, have some enamel cups; they are worth all they cost. Children won't mind tin spoons, but your adult friends will bless you for providing spoons of nickel or silver. The same goes for forks, too, if the meal requires them. Just check up before packing for the return trip and you need not worry about loss. Remember the sharp knife for bread, unless sandwiches are all made beforehand. If there are many people, it is much better to let them spread their own, thick or thin, with two or three fillings to choose from. If a table is used the new cloths of lovely tinted rubberized fabric are just the thing. They stay "put" though the breezes blow, and require no laundry work—just careful wiping with a clean damp cloth, and they are ready for the next orgy.

Unless quite certain of a safe water supply it is well to carry a capacious jug of water. A big vacuum jar keeps it cold a long time, or will carry hot food perfectly when desired. These jugs are so cheap now that a family with picnic tendencies should have a couple of them. It's surprising how welcome plain hot food is on a cool day in the woods, even the lowly baked beans being greeted with joy. A fireless cooker kettle wrapped in several layers of paper will carry hot food with excellent satisfaction if not imposed upon by a long trip. Heat the kettle well before placing the steaming food in it.

Coffee made in the open seems to taste better than any other, but we should provide a fine strainer unless the coffee be tied in cheese cloth. If we carry hot coffee from home the cream should be packed separately, not blended beforehand.

There must be an ample sandwich supply or plenty of makings. Creamed butter spreads easier and goes farther than plain butter. For chopped meats, a mixture of butter and a thick white sauce answers admirably. Chopped pickle adds piquancy and finely cut celery adds freshness. Avoid high seasonings on the small children's plates. They love bread and jam. Cream cheese is good for little folks, too, and they like it with chopped dates or marmalade. Adults will find plenty to choose from here.

Savory Sandwiches.

Whole Wheat Bread—Equal parts of chutney and butter, some lemon juice and French mustard.

Chopped cooked eggs, anchovy paste, mayonnaise.

White Bread—Chopped veal with horseradish.

Rye Bread—Corned beef, horseradish and pickle.

Crushed crisp bacon, cream cheese or dressing.

Good potato salad is a sure fire hit if moist and well seasoned, and savory cabbage slaw makes a good second. Real New England brown bread is a marvelous foundation for cream cheese, especially if the cheese is chock full of chopped ripe olives or nuts. Stuffed olives are popular appetizers, though why necessary at a picnic, who can say? Sardines are delectable on long crisp crackers, so don't forget the can opener. Nothing tastes more refreshing than chilled tomatoes. Serve 'em whole with nothing but salt and watch them disappear. Radishes retain their crispness if wrapped in wet cloth and packed in a covered container. By the way, the cylinder shaped pasteboard cartons that the grocers use for oysters can be purchased cheaply, are light to carry and useful for many purposes.

Chopped eggs packed in a mold with salad dressing to bind are easier for the housewife than the troublesome stuffed eggs and a little minced bacon or ham to add zest if not provided in sandwich form. Fish paste makes a good flavor, too.

Sweets are less important, but some must be provided. Cup cakes baked in paper cases retain their freshness, are easy to pack and to serve. Individual pastries are also satisfying, and fresh fruit is best of all. Be sure and provide straws for the fruit beverage, which may be raspberry lemonade, diluted grape juice with a dash of lemon, or your own favorite combination. Remember that a cooked syrup makes for smoothness and saves sugar. Take plenty of paper napkins for the children, but real napkins for the grown-ups are a genuine delight.

COMMUNISTS MOVE TO RELIEVE FAMINE

Government Takes Steps To Establish Many Food Plants.

MOSCOW, July 4.—(AP)—Now that the government feels it has solved the grain problem, steps are being taken by the authorities to relieve the present acute food shortage by rushing to completion a number of large food plants throughout the country.

Announcement was made today that margarine factories will be completed at Stalingrad this fall. They will have a yearly capacity of 18,000 tons of margarine and 15,000 tons of vegetable oil. In Moscow a similar plant with 7,000 tons capacity will be opened this fall.

A vegetable, meat and fruit canning plant with an output of 45,000,000 cans is nearing completion in Stalingrad. Plans are being drawn for a coffee and tea pressing factory at Irkutsk, Siberia. Fifty poultry farms with 675,000 chickens will be operating by autumn.

The greatest fruit farm and canning industry in the world, the announcement added, is being organized in northern Caucasus. In Crimea incubators for 1,000,000 eggs are being built. Plans call for other new incubators in various parts of the soviet union with an aggregate capacity of 8,000,000 eggs.

Until these enterprises actually are in operation the government will be obliged to continue the present rationing of meat, bread, water, sugar, rice, flour, tea and other necessities. The system imposes considerable hardships on Russians and foreigners alike. As an accommodation to foreigners, the government now allows its engineers, technicians and correspondents, including Americans, to bring their own food supplies duty free, providing they are brought in as personal baggage.

Lloyd George Warns Of National Mistrust

BOURNEMOUTH, England, July 4. (AP)—A grave warning that the international atmosphere is "poisoned with mistrust and suspicion" was delivered to the banquet of the International Congregational church council delegates tonight by former Premier Lloyd George.

The liberal leader declared that the peace of the world depended upon the co-operation and good-will of Great Britain and the United States.

"It is vital in the interests of the human race that Britain and America should march side by side solving the great problems that await us.

"Peace is by no means secure. In spite of treaties man has not yet given up the idea of war. Preparations for war are going on in every country of the world. There are more men trained for war in Europe, Asia and America than before the great catastrophe of 1914."

Lloyd George asserted that except for countries like Germany that were forced to reduce their armaments, Great Britain was the only country that had diminished its forces to a point where they were at least no more than before the war.

Zone Law Violations Charged by Lyle

Charging that the borough zoning laws are flagrantly violated in Atlanta, Councilman George B. Lyle, of the eleventh ward, announced Friday that he will introduce a measure before council Monday seeking to force all persons making applications for business licenses to produce a certificate from the planning commission, showing that the business location is in accordance with law. Lyle stated that photographic galleries, printing plants and other small shops were being operated without regard to zoning laws.

HOOVER APPROVES BILL TO ACQUIRE COLLECTION

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—President Hoover today signed a measure authorizing the purchase for $1,500,000 of the noted Vollbehr collection of incunabula.

Among the 3,000 volumes, comprising early works on subjects ranging from natural science, law and medicine to cookery and marriage—all of which will be turned over to the Library of Congress, is the famous Guttenberg Bible.

The money for the purchase of the collection was included in the second deficiency bill.

A., B. & C. Railroad Continues Schedule

The Atlanta, Birmingham and Coast Railroad continued business on its regular schedule Friday, despite the loss of the road's freight depot which was destroyed by fire Thursday at a loss estimated as between $100,000 and $200,000.

An additional track was placed into operation while a produce warehouse directly across the street from the burned structure was pressed into service and incoming and outgoing freight was handled without interruption, according to P. L. Graves, general agent. Work began Friday on a new 250-foot loading platform which will be an extension of the platform used by the produce warehouse. According to Mr. Graves, no plans had been discussed Friday for reconstruction of the burned building.

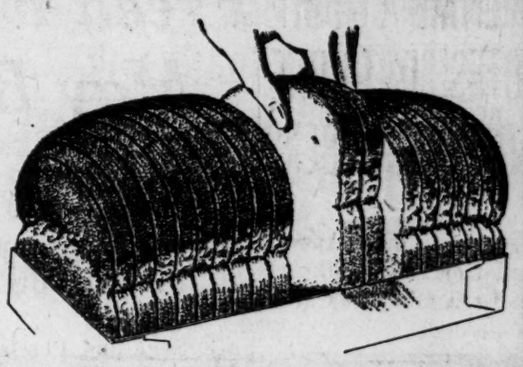

Negro Hurt in Fight Dies at City Hospital

Jake Step, colored, of 541 One-half street, Friday engaged in an argument with John Moseley, of 475 Ennis street, [illegible] after he had driven his own family from home, knocked Step over a banister rail to the ground 10 feet below. Step died at Grady from concussion of the brain. Moseley was carried to the station under the influence of liquor, and booked on a charge of murder.

MINE WORKERS CALL FOR AID FROM HOOVER

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., July 4. (AP)—District 31, United Mine Workers of America, at a special convention here today authorized the dispatch of a letter to President Hoover calling his attention to conditions in the northern West Virginia coal field and urging him to call a conference of operators and miners.

The letter declared coal operators reduced miners' wages, eliminated safety measures to curtail expenditures and that the 10 and 12-hour work-day had returned.

"Men wait at the tipple to receive their scrip from the weighman so they can go to the store and get food for their families," the letter continued, "They go to work without dinner buckets, for they have nothing to put in them. In one school 28 out of 52 pupils were sent home by the teacher because they were undernourished."

The convention adopted a policy against further wage cuts, saying "We may as well starve fighting for a decent wage as starve working for present low wages."

Dread Mafia Faces Another Court Blow

SCIACCIA, Italy, July 4.—(AP)—The Mafia, scourge of Sicily, will be dealt another blow with the opening here tomorrow of the trial of 214 men.

The crimes cover a period of 20 years and the accused are charged, among other things, with 43 homicides, 24 attempted homicides, thefts, cases of extortion and violence in the territory of Madonie.

The documents in the cases fill 69 volumes and the government prosecutors are confident of a successful outcome. They say the present round-up is the most important since the dramatic clean-up of the Palermo district in 1927 and 1928.

The Mafia long has been notorious for its bloody vendettas and the course of justice has been impeded by the traditional "Sicilian omerta," or refusal to testify.

Royal Reconciliation Again Believed Near

BUCHAREST, July 4.—(AP)—Well-informed circles said today an agreement had been reached for cancellation of the divorce of King Carol II and Queen Helen, with the courts soon to issue a decree of annulment.

As an indication of the approaching reconciliation, King Carol tomorrow will accompany the queen and their son, the former Boy-King Michael, to the railway station as they leave for Sinaia.

The king will join his family there in a few days, it is understood.

KINGSFORD-SMITH COMPLETES FLIGHT

Kingsford-Smith was the only member of the crew that left Oakland, May 31, 1928, for Australia, the start of a world-circling flight which carried the blue-winged plane into both the north and south hemispheres, and across the South seas.

Thousands cheered as the great plane dropped swiftly to the field bearing the flight commander, radio operator, John Stannage; J. Patton Saul, navigator, and Evert Van Dyk, co-pilot.

Although the Southern Cross and Commander Kingsford-Smith completed the aerial circumnavigation of the globe, the commander said he never intended such a project when he and his crew lifet Oakland and started across the Pacific.

The Southern Cross was escorted from Mt. Diablo, 25 miles east of Oakland, by pursuit planes.

The fliers were welcomed by Mayor John L. Davie, of Oakland, and other officials who escorted them to Oakland, where a reception was held.

Kingsford-Smith set at rest speculation concerning disposition of the famed Southern Cross, Fokker plane which has been his flying partner three years.

The commander said he would take the ship to Santa Maria next week and present it to Captain Allen Hancock, backer of the first flight from Oakland to Australia.

"I am in very much of a hurry to get back to Australia, where I have a wedding engagement in late September," the flier said. "When we dispose of the ship I expect to fly back to New York, take a ship to England and go direct to Australia."

The commander said his world flights are over. He will wed Miss Mary Powell in Sydney, next September.

Heflinites Seek Overthrow Of Alabama Party Chiefs

Meeting in Birmingham Is Advised by Senator To "Stay Out of Primary," Elect New Committee.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 4.—(AP) A convention of supporters of Senator J. Thomas Heflin, independent candidate for United States senator, and Judge Hugh A. Locke, candidate for governor, to be held in Montgomery, September 1, today was called under resolutions adopted by a mass meeting here.

The resolution which authorizes the convention to nominate a complete ticket "if said convention deems it wise," and to draw up a platform also provided that each election box in the state shall send one delegate.

Senator Heflin and Judge Locke, both barred from participating in the democratic primary of August 12, under the ruling of the state democratic executive committee adopted on December 16, 1929, prohibiting persons who failed to support the party ticket in 1928 from participating as candidates, spoke for the resolution. They also urged their supporters not to vote in the August 12 primary.

Each declared that the mass meeting and subsequent conventions do not mean the formation of a third party but termed their efforts a "rescue of the democratic party in Alabama."

In addition to the resolution calling the state convention, the mass meeting adopted resolutions endorsing the candidacies of Senator Heflin and Judge Locke and that of Dempsey Powell, of Greenville, an anti-Smith leader in 1928, for lieutenant-governor.

Under another resolution, supporters of the three candidates were authorized to hold county conventions on August 12 to nominate Senator Heflin, Judge Locke and Mr. Powell, who at the morning session was named permanent chairman, for the offices to which they aspire.

Under Alabama law, no nominations could be made today, the law specifying that, except in presidential years, parties shall not nominate candidates before the first Tuesday after the second Monday in August. On presidential years nominations may be made in May.

Throughout the day speakers before the mass meeting attacked the 27 members of the state committee who voted to bar party bolters of 1928 and attacked former Governor Al Smith of New York, the party standard bearer in 1928, and John J. Raskob, chairman of the national executive committee.

Judge Locke in speaking for the resolution calling the state convention said that to him it was "apparent that Smith would run again in 1932." He called attention to a previous resolution declaring that the mass meeting indorsed an election for a new state democratic executive committee in 1931 and declared if elected he would sponsor legislation to that end.

"The hand of Raskob is in Alabama today," Judge Locke said, and charged that the action of the committee on December 16 was the result of the national chairman's activity.

"He knew as long as the party stayed together he had no chance to get a solidified party to send a delegation to the national convention instructed for Al Smith," Judge Locke said.

Judge Locke said the only "plan to rescue the party" was the plan proposed in the resolution and the election of a new state executive committee in 1931.

"We are in the house of our fathers," said Senator Heflin in opening his address for the resolution. "We are preparing for a house cleaning."

Referring to the warning of Washington and Jefferson of the dangers of "corrupt leadership," Senator Heflin said, "We are called upon to redeem our party."

Senator Heflin declared the "south has repudiated Smith" in 1928, and that the state executive committee had barred those who joined the movement.

"Am I to be crucified because I opposed him," he asked, and cries of "No, No," responded from the floor.

Senator Heflin charged "Tammany sells the nomination," then said it "looks like they are getting that way down here. It takes a millionaire to run for United States senator and you have got two of them, John Bankhead and Frederick I. Thompson."

Bankhead and Thompson are candidates for the democratic nomination for the United States senate in the primary of August 12.

Turning to the action of the democratic executive committee, Senator Heflin declared "we tried to have harmony," but that the committee in answer to his pleas had "shut the door in my face." He said the same thing had occurred to Judge Locke.

Urging his supporters to stay out of the democratic primary, Senator Heflin said, "You tell these people who ask you to come into the primary you are not going to stultify yourself."

He declared the action of the committee was illegal and "there was no way to right this thing except to unhorse the committee."

"We want to make that the smallest primary ever held in this state," the senator said. "They won't get 50,000 votes out of the 300,000 in the state."

Senator Heflin charged "they boast they are going to steal it," and added "if they do I'll start on a senatorial investigation inside a week."

A portion of the crowd started leaving as Senator Heflin finished and several resolutions were quickly adopted, among them one to leave it to the voters in the county to decide whether they would participate in the primary for county offices, another leaving it to the state convention to frame the platform.

Both Senator Heflin and Judge Locke addressed a third session of the rally tonight.

Dr. Frank Eskridge Removed to His Home

E. M. YOW, RETIRED BUSINESSMAN, DIES

E. M. Yow, 70, retired wholesale grocer, one of the founders of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church and for many years a member of the First Baptist church, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Lillian Yow Weller, 79 Twelfth street, Friday night after a stroke of apoplexy.

Mr. Yow was born and reared in Franklin county but came to Atlanta possibly 40 years ago. At one time he was one of the leading business men of the city until forced into retirement by advanced age and declining health. He erected a number of the largest apartment houses in Atlanta when apartment houses were just beginning to be introduced here.

In addition to his daughter, Mrs. Weller, he is survived by two sons, Claude Yow, of College Park, and Edwin Yow, of Atlanta; and two sisters, Mrs. T. A. Stovall, of Lavonia, and Mrs. Luke Felton, of Martin. Funeral arrangements are in charge of H. M. Patterson & Son and announcements will be made later.

HUNTER BROTHERS LAND PLANE

down, but added that it would have been too risky to attempt staying up any longer. "We had hoped to keep going at least until tomorrow," he said. "But when the oil screen clogged and the gauge quit, we thought the only thing to do was come down. The oil was spurting back on us pretty bad.

"We sure are tickled to death with our new record, but what we want most right now is a bath and rest."

Neither of the fliers had any definite idea concerning their future. "Just give me a bath," exclaimed Kenneth. "You don't know how much you miss one until you do without for three or four weeks." He revealed neither he nor John had bathed during the whole time of their flight, although he said they had shaved occasionally.

Borrows Trousers.

After a brief rest the two pilots and their brothers, Walter and Albert Hunter, who manned the refueling plane, were escorted to the top of the hangar and introduced to the crowd amid cheers. It was announced they would be taken to a Chicago Loop hotel, for an overnight rest, and the crowd was invited to join in an automobile parade to the Loop.

Kenneth had to borrow a pair of trousers before he could remove his grimy overalls. He explained he had torn the leg from his own pants, to use as a rag.

John, wreathed in smiles, praised the monoplane which carried him and his brother to the new world's record. "The little old motor sure did more than we expected and except for the oil trouble was just as sound when we came down as when we went up."

The brothers complained about losing much sleep the last few days, blaming the numerous other planes which kept circling near them as they soared around the airport. "We had to keep our eyes open most of the time."

The boys said they limited themselves to only two meals a day, in the morning and evening, and said they didn't begin to get used to their aerial meals until they had been up about a week.

Always Plenty to Do.

They divided the task of piloting the ship, each taking the control for intervals of from three to five hours, while the other caught a few moments nap, looked over the plane and performed the other necessary duties.

Neither of the boys could give a clear description of their feelings after more than three weeks in the air. "We didn't have a chance to think about how we felt," John said. "The radio was our only recreation."

"There was always plenty to do, with changing oil, cleaning valves, working on the engine and keeping our cabin as clean as possible. We weren't really groggy until today and that was because we lost so much sleep the last few days with all those other planes flying around us.

"You can't blame our landing on anything. That motor is running just as smooth right now as the day we went up. We never even changed a spark plug in it. Just a few little repairs to the oil line will give us a real motor again.

"Tomorrow at noon," John said, "I'll be out walking but I have no other plans, until I get a good night's sleep and see how it feels to have my feet on the ground again."

Both boys seemed sleepy as they talked with newspapermen. They were really sleepy. Questions had to be put to them three and four times before they were fully understood, their drowsiness and partial deafness making it difficult for them to hear.

To Make Another Flight.

John said he lost no time in coming down after the trouble developed because he feared he might crack up with the motor spraying oil all over them and the cabin. "I had hoped to drop a note just before we landed, but when the time came to come down, I didn't think it advisable to take any chances."

In the next flight, John said he will have a dual oil screen so that one could be disconnected and cleaned while the other was functioning. And the next flight, he said, will be made just as soon as other fliers equal or beat the record made by him and Kenneth.

Both John and Kenneth said they hoped to make a nonstop refueling flight around the borders of the United States as quickly as it can be arranged.

John qualified his statements about the future, to make it clear that the record flying may be done by any of the four Hunter brothers. He intimated that in their next trip he and Kenneth might man the refueling plane while Walter and Albert serve as the endurance crew.

The City of Chicago, grimy with oil, was nestled in the hangar under a heavy guard against souvenir hunters, while the Hunter boys decided what they would do next and when they would do it.

The record-breaking plane is a second-hand Stinson-Detroiter, powered by a Wright Whirlwind motor of 300 horsepower. It is two years old and was built and sold to the C. A. K. Air Lines in 1928 for commercial aviation. After considerable service on that line, it was sold to the "Chicago —We Will" corporation and used by them in two endurance flights here last fall, each of ten days' duration. It had flown approximately 70,000 miles before it went up on its latest flight.

ATLANTAN DROWNS IN LAKE BURTON

A Fourth of July fishing trip resulted in tragedy for a young Atlantan when Clarence Waters, 22-year-old son of H. L. Waters, of 561 Atwood street, S. W., was drowned late Friday afternoon in Lake Burton in Rabun county.

Waters, an employee of the American Railway Express company and a former student of Tech High, accompanied by a school chum, Gene Keller, went to the mountain resort Thursday afternoon to spend the week-end on a fishing trip. The two pitched camp on the west side of the lake and while taking a dip in the lake late Friday afternoon the accident occurred.

Information from Clayton was meager as to details concerning the drowning, but it was understood that young Waters sank, possibly from an attack of cramps, about 100 feet from shore and that though the accident occurred shortly after 4 o'clock the body was not recovered until 7 o'clock.

An inquest was held at the lake before the body was sent to Atlanta, accompanied by Keller. Barclay & Brandon will be in charge of arrangements.

Waters was born and reared in Atlanta, the son of H. L. Waters, connected with Randall Brothers, handling millwork and lumber. He received his education at Tech High. In addition to his father he is survived by his mother and three brothers, H. L., Jr., J. R. and Forrest L. Waters, all of Atlanta.

HOOVER CALLS SENATE INTO SESSION MONDAY

BY HERBERT LITTLE,
United News Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(UN)—President Hoover threw down the gage of battle to irreconciliable isolationist element in and out of the republican party today, by summoning the senate to meet Monday in special session to consider the London naval treaty.

Mr. Hoover, after formally issuing the call, departed for a week-end in the cool Virginia mountains, confident of his majority for adoption of that momentous international document.

But he and the senate treaty supporters faced a more formidable enemy—the pull of politics on senators and a lack of enthusiasm in many senators for long weeks in Washington's heat.

There were only 63 senators in town last night when congress adjourned—33 were absent—and loss of 16 more would mean that the violent treaty opponents, Johnson, of California, or Moses, of New Hampshire, could make a point of "no quorum" and tie the senate's hands.

Many of the 63 who answered calls in the senate last night left for the Independence Day week-end at home, and the possibility was foreseen that before the session is far along, senate agents may have to be sent out in the highways and byways to arrest members and bring them back in the senate.

Nearly 30 of the 96 senators have election campaigns of their own. A few are retiring from the senate to seek the peace and quiet which their labors have earned for them. The others are vitally interested in the congressional campaigns in every state and some of the states are holding gubernatorial campaigns.

Paradoxically a veteran Woodrow Wilson democrat, Senator Claude A. Swanson, of Virginia, will lead most of the fight for Mr. Hoover's treaty. He is the ranking democrat of the foreign relations committee, the chairman of which, Borah, of Idaho, is acquiescent to but not enthusiastic about the treaty. Borah, however, is expected to support the treaty.

The "young Turk" group of republican senators, a dozen comparatively new members who have worked independently in many cases from the "old guard" established leadership, will stand firm for the treaty, however. These senators usually follow the leadership of Senator Allen, of Kansas, or Vandenberg, of Michigan.

The little group of opponents, mostly republicans, resemble at this stage of the combat the group of Versailles treaty opponents at the outset of that famous battle—a group which President Wilson termed "a group of wilful men."

Hiram Johnson, of California, is the leader and ablest floor fighter of this little group. He is staunchly supported by Chairman Hale, of the naval affairs committee, who is otherwise one of the most regular of administration men; Shipstead, of Minnesota, the affable and popular dentist and sole farmer-laborite of the senate; Moses, of New Hampshire, and Robinson, of Indiana.

The anti-treaty men will fight on several issues. They oppose the treaty, they oppose what Moses calls the "indecent" haste which Mr. Hoover has used in demanding early ratification, they condemn the state department and Mr. Hoover for withholding important secret documents. In the words of Johnson, they hold the treaty is a document that will cost a billion dollars and buy only naval inferiority to Britain.

These opposing senators will make much of the treaty, ratified or not, in the November election campaigns.

The president's proclamation in its preamble indicated Mr. Hoover's intense interest in the treaty, saying: "Public interest requires that the senate of the United States be reconvened at 12 o'clock on the 7th day of July next to receive such communications as may be made by the executive and in particular to consider and determine whether the advice and consent of the senate shall be given to the ratification of a treaty for the limitation and reduction of armament signed at London on April 22, 1930."

Gold Star Mother Gets Poilu's Blood

PARIS, July 4.—(AP)—French surgeons this forenoon performed a transfusion upon Mrs. Edwin Lange, Oshkosh, Wis., Gold Star mother, accepting the blood of a French former soldier who refused to let his identity be revealed.

Negro Fatally Wounded.

David Reed, negro, of 347 Moseley street, was fatally wounded late Friday at the corner of Foot and Taylor streets when an unknown negro fired a load of shot into his chest. Police said the two had an argument over a woman.

Blevins Takes First Honors At Gainesville Aerial Meet

BY GENE HINTON.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., July 4.—(Special.)—Taking third place in the Atlanta-to-Gainesville derby, which ushered in this city's two-day air meet, and first place in the only other two events which took place on the abbreviated program for today, Beeler Blevins, veteran Atlanta pilot, carried off principal honors for the day and pocketed a not inconsiderable portion of the $1,300 in cash and trophies which will go to victorious fliers.

At the controls of his Travel Air Speedwing, equipped with a N. A. C. A. cowling, Doug Davis sprang something of a surprise by finishing first in the on-to-Gainesville affair, negotiating the distance in 24 minutes and 13 seconds and landing some 35 seconds ahead of George Shealy in second place. Shealy, flying a special low-wing monoplane from the shops of Wedell-Williams, at Patterson, La., with a rated top speed of 190 miles an hour, reported that he encountered engine trouble soon after leaving Candler field.

In the Blevins' Aircraft Corporation's Lycoming-powered Stinson Junior, Blevins finished third with a time of 34 minutes, 40 seconds. Johnny Gill, in a DH Gypsy Moth, finished out of the money, covering the distance in 35 minutes, 30 seconds.

Davis won $100 by virtue of his victory, Shealy was awarded $50 and Blevins $25.

Because service ships are prohibited from taking part in air races on Independence Day, all speed events scheduled for today were postponed by the committee until Saturday, and two other events, originally scheduled for tomorrow, moved up.

Flying a Warner-powered Waco "Model F" against a large field of contestants, Blevins walked away with the dead-stick landing contest, which was not a "dead stick" affair at all, officials deciding against the hazards of a dead motor on a small field and decreeing that landings be made with engines idling.

Blevins brought his Waco to rest only 12 feet, six inches from the line, followed by Doug Davis and Johnny Gill, each of whom flew a DH Moth, 40 feet, six inches, and 46 feet, two inches, respectively.

Virtually every ship on the field participated in the balloon-bursting contest—pilots required to break two or three small balloons, released from the cockpit—which was won by Blevins in his Waco with a time of 47 seconds. Doug Davis, in his Travel Air, was second, with a time of one minute, 30 seconds; E. W. Hightower, Waco "Model F", two minutes, seven seconds, third; Ben T. Epps, of Athens, in a Waco "nine" two minutes, 10 seconds, fourth.

The events for the day were concluded with an exhibition of acrobatics by Doug Davis, who earned the fine hand he received.

Many Atlanta fliers were on hand for the proceedings, in addition to Blevins, Davis, Gill, Shealy and Hightower. G. A. Cutrell, assistant chief of the inspection service of the department of commerce, was present in the department's Verville Air Coach; James A. Perry, Jr., of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, flew to the meet in a Challenger Robin; Mack Wynn in a Command-Air, and James T. Williams, Jr., his Waco "Model F". Other Georgia fliers included Bill Cummings, of Rome, in a Kreider-Reisner Challenger, Ben T. Epps, of Athens, in a Waco "9", and his 13-year-old son, Ben T., Jr., "Georgia's youngest pilot."

A number of races, which will include practically every engine classification, will top Saturday's schedule, which also calls for several parachute drops, by Reo Flock, feminine exponent of the art, Private Conner, of Maxwell Field, Bonnie Rowe, of Atlanta, and others.

Mississippi Candidate Claims 'Persecution'

LOUISVILLE, Miss., July 4.—(AP) Lester C. Franklin, candidate for governor, today assailed his political and personal enemies for persistent efforts to "persecute him" since he entered public life as chairman of the state commission.

"But as before," he said, "I emerge from the fracas bloody but with head erect."

Franklin spoke on his acquittal by the senate on charges of impeachment preferred by the house as a result of investigation of the $80,000 payment by Warren Brothers Road Company of Boston for abandonment of the proposed $10,000,000 state anti-trust suit.

Franklin reviewed the incidents leading to its discovery and declared that efforts to link him with it was based on "political persecution." He charged the house roving committee with "handing out" colored stories and only information it desired for the press.

He said that his refusal to permit Carl Marshall, Bay St. Louis attorney, to testify concerning personal and private relations was based on his contention that the "committee was merely seeking to ruin me, politically."

Mississippi Baptist Pastor Drowns in River

HATTIESBURG, Miss., July 4.—(AP)—Dr. R. E. Marriner, pastor of the First Baptist church here today suffered a heart attack and was drowned while swimming with a picnic party in Leave river four miles from McLain, Miss. He was rescued from the water by members of the party, but efforts to resuscitate him were futile. The holiday outing was given for employes and friends by a local merchant.

Dr. Marriner was one of the church leaders of this city. He came here in October, 1926, from Leland, Miss., and accepted the pastorate of the local church.

His wife died about two months ago. One child, Jeanette, aged 13, survives.

Ring Lost in Planting Grows on Corn Stalk

SHREVEPORT, La., July 4. (UN)—A cornstalk found Cullen Keith's lost gold ring, picked it up and gave it to him.

March 15, 1915, Keith, while sowing sugar cane, lost a highly prized gold ring, one worn by his wife before their marriage. He gave up hope of finding it until he found it today encircling a cornstalk near the place he lost it.

Keith thinks that a grain of corn sprouted directly beneath the ring and grew through it. He identified it by the engraved initials, "C. B. K."

HOOVER GOES TO HILLS TO PREPARE MESSAGE

ORANGE, Va., July 4.—(AP)—To the same verdant woods where less than a year ago he sat down with Ramsay MacDonald to survey the problems of international peace, President Hoover went today to ponder the message that is to urge congress to ratify the treaty which sprang from that survey.

Except that the leaves had been untouched by autumnal chill, the scene amid which the president gave thought to his coming struggle with congress was the same as that which lay before him and the British prime minister as they paced back and forth beside the Rapidan last October.

Much water has gone down the Rapidan since that time and their project has moved forward to the last stages. Each, however, has described it as the first step toward lessening the burdens of armaments and easing frictions among the nations of the world.

The president went to his Virginia retreat today without the large group of guests which usually accompanies him. In the automobile with him were his secretary, Walter Newton; Mrs. Newton, and their son, John Marshall. Behind came Lawrence Richey, another secretary.

Several guests were already at the lodge, but for the most part they were friends of an intimacy dating back to the days when he lived on "S" street instead of Pennsylvania avenue. Some of them had gone ahead to visit with Mrs. Hoover, who has been there for several weeks recuperating from an injured back.

The president's journey to the camp was slowed by the holiday-clogged roads and various minor delays. At a narrow bridge across the Rappahannock his party was forced to wait for a herd of cows, which had started over the stream ahead of him. A broken spring forced Richey's car to drop out of the party.

There was no fishing at the lodge, the Virginia season having closed on June 30, and the presidential party devoted much of the time to riding, walks through the hills and horseshoe pitching. They will remain over the week-end.

Naval Reserve Unit Leaves for Cruise

The Atlanta battalion of the United States naval reserve, 125 strong, and led by 10 officers, left Atlanta at 9:15 o'clock Friday night for Charleston, S. C., where today they will embark on their annual two-week cruise from the Charleston navy yard.

While on the cruise the unit will be on the U. S. S. Lawrence and the U. S. S. Humphries, destroyers of the navy scouting fleet. The first objective will be Hampton Roads, Va., and a visit will be paid to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

THREE WOMEN SOUGHT IN DETROIT KILLINGS

Police Say They Can Throw Light on Gangster Outbreak.

DETROIT, July 4.—(AP)—Police believed tonight that three women held the key to the gangland execution of two Chicago hoodlums and the wounding of another man last night near the heart of Detroit's downtown district.

One is Mrs. Julia Kuffel Connors, widow of a Chicago racketeer, who was killed nine months ago, and more recently a sweetheart of William Cannon, one of the assassin's victims last night.

Another is known as Lou McDonald, said by police to be the common law wife of George Collins, the other hoodlum who died from a gangster bullet in last night's killings.

The other woman is Mrs. Mabel Barrett, sister of Cannon. She lives at the LaSalle hotel, by the side of which the three men were shot down, and had talked to Cannon by telephone earlier in the day. Police are convinced she can shed light on her brother's activities which will help solve te crime.

Detroit police left today for Chicago to question Mrs. Connors, arrested there last night after it had been learned she owned the car in which the triple shooting occurred. She gave as the probable motive jealousy of an unnamed man or men over Cannon's attentions to her, but police doubt that theory and intend to question her at length.

The McDonald woman was arrested early this morning when she visited the county morgue and identified Collins' body as that of a man who had visited her several times within the last two years.

Chemical Explosion Kills Eleven Britons

CASTLEFORD, England, July 4.—(AP)—A violent explosion of chemicals this afternoon instantly killed eleven persons and wrecked the factory of the Hicksons and Parsons Chemical Works.

Police and workmen searching the ruins recovered 11 bodies up to this evening and continued the hunt for more. More than 20 badly injured persons were taken to the hospital.

The cause of the explosion, which was so tremendous that it was heard and felt in towns ten miles away, has not been determined.

Rescuers could venture into the debris only after dense clouds of noxious smoke and gases had been blown away by the wind. Fire apparatus and ambulances were rushed to Castleford from other communities, in many cases without having been summoned, by the mere sound of the explosion. It was realized in other towns that a serious accident had occurred.

At least 500 persons were homeless here tonight. Many dwellings having been rendered uninhabitable by the force of the explosion. Men, Women and children wandered about the ruined streets, gazing at what was left of their homes, and wondering where to spend the night.

The urban council and relief organizations have taken measures to provide for the homeless.

Mrs. J. P. Wey Hurt In Auto Accident

SAVANNAH, July 4.—(AP)—Mrs. J. P. Wey, of Atlanta, was brought to Savannah late today after being painfully injured near Statesboro about noon when the car she was driving turned over on the highway and pinned her beneath it.

Mrs. Wey was motoring to Savannah alone to visit Mrs. H. G. Mills, No. 5 West 37th street, and was at Mrs. Mills' home tonight. Her injuries were not thought to be serious, though they consisted of a wrenched back and a number of bruises.

Mrs. Wey was unable to explain how the accident to her car occurred. She was driving along alone when something went wrong and the machine turned over. Passing motorists extricated her and she was taken back to Statesboro. Later in the afternoon she boarded the bus and came into Savannah.

TWO POLICEMEN HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Two policemen were injured early Friday night when their car overturned while chasing an automobile filled with negroes who had been celebrating the Fourth.

Patrolman W. A. Adair and Patrolman J. R. Pittman were in the machine, driven by the latter, when it overturned at the corner of Harris street and Piedmont avenue. Their car was going north on Piedmont avenue when an auto driven by an unidentified white man, came out of Harris street without stopping at a boulevard stop sign, it is said. Pittman swerved his car in an effort to prevent a collision and the machine was overturned.

Adair suffered a broken arm, cuts about the head and face and possible internal injuries. Pittman was bruised and cut about the body and suffered possible internal injuries. Both were treated at Grady hospital and were later removed to their homes.

Aviatrix Sets New Altitude Record

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 4.—(AP)—Ruth Alexander, flying in a 90-horsepower Barling monoplane, today soared to a height of 20,000 feet. The former altitude record for women, set by Miss Alexander about six months ago, was 15,000 feet.

BORDER UNREST AGAIN WORRIES BRITISH INDIA

BOMBAY, July 4.—(AP)—A renewal of unrest on the northwest frontier was reported from Peshawar today, dispatches saying that malcontents were trying to stir new action among the Utman Khel tribesmen.

It was added that the Utman Khels, who recently suffered from the operations of the British royal air force, had thus far refused to become excited over the agitation.

The Haji of Turangzai, belligerent tribal leader, who has been encamped near Peshawar with his followers several months, also was reported to be stirring again. It was understood that he had sent messengers into the Mohammedan country, asking the fierce tribesmen to renew their struggle against the government.

The Afridi Jirgas have met in council twice lately, the more adventurous urging action, but no warlike forces have yet been formed.

Here to the southward, where the nationalists are carrying on the civil disobedience movement of Mahatma Gandhi, Pandit Madan Malaviya today was appointed president of the working committee of the All-India national congress by Vallabhai Patel, head of the congress itself.

The Pandit only recently announced his adhesion to the working committee, taking that action after the body had been proscribed by the Indian government. Patel's action was interpreted as showing the determination of the congress to proceed with vigor despite government prohibitions.

Forty-four prominent Moslems met today at Simla to discuss the Simon report and it was reported there was a wide divergence of opinion. While the Moslems in general have held aloof from the Gandhi campaign, many of them expressed opposition to the Simon report after it was published.

Mystery Plane Falls Into Pacific Ocean

ALAMEDA, Cal., July 4.—(UN)—A three-passenger biplane plunged into San Francisco bay off Alameda airport late today.

Search for bodies had not been successful several hours later.

Airport officials were endeavoring to ascertain who chartered the plane, owned by the Alameda Flying Club, and to determine how many passengers were in it when the disastrous dive occurred.

National Waterways System Assured Under Federal Act

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—President Hoover signed a rivers and harbors bill today which in his own words authorizes a larger project than the Panama canal.

In a statement issued after he had attached his signature, the chief executive enumerated three prospective benefits which may come from the measure.

"It will provide employment for thousands of men. It should be fruitful of decreased transportation charges on bulk goods, should bring great benefits to our farms and to our industries. It should result in a better distribution of population away from the congested centers."

The measure more than doubled the amount of authorizations given in the last rivers and harbors bill signed on January 21, 1926, by President Coolidge. That one authorized $71,000,000 of work, some of which is still going forward.

Since its inception in the 70th congress it has grown from its infant proportions of $55,000,000 to the towering stature of $145,000,000. One hundred and seventy projects are given government approval under it. The work is to be done over a period of from 1 to 15 years.

Barge System Seen.

President Hoover said that under it: "We can now build the many remaining segments of a definite canalization of our river systems through which modern barge trains of 10,000 to 15,000 tons of burden can operate systematically through the midwest and to the Gulf of Mexico, and through the lakes to the Atlantic.

"The system when completed will have 12,000 miles of waterways and will give waterway connection between such great cities as New Orleans, Memphis, Knoxville, Chattanooga, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Sioux City, Keokuk, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Evansville, Cincinnati, Wheeling and Pittsburgh. Through the Great Lakes and the Erie canal many of these points will have access to central New York and the Atlantic. By its authorization for deepening of lake channels we shall support the present commerce of the Great Lakes and make preparation for ocean shipping by the ultimate deepening of the St. Lawrence. It authorizes numerous improvements in our harbors.

"It is a long view plan for the future. It will require many years to complete its construction. I do not propose that we should proceed in a haphazard manner, but that we should approach the problem on sound engineering lines, completing the main trunk systems and gradually extending the work outward along the lateral rivers."

Take Over Canals.

Among its major projects, the act provides for the government to take over the Erie and Oswego canals and the Illinois water, and for a 9-foot channel in the upper Mississippi between the mouth of the Illinois and St. Paul and Minneapolis, a 6-foot channel in the upper Missouri from Kansas City to Sioux City, a 9-foot channel on the Tennessee from its mouth to Knoxville.

Others include channel deepening along the Great Lakes, work along the St. Lawrence waterway, and a Lake Okeechobee flood control project, in addition to numerous smaller harbor and waterway development activities.

The text of President Hoover's statement follows:

"In aggregate this inland waterway undertaking represents a larger project than even the Panama Canal. It will provide employment for thousands of men. It should be fruitful of decreased transportation charges on bulk goods, should bring great benefits to our farms and to our industries. It should result in a better distribution of population away from the congested centers.

"It was with particular satisfaction that I signed the rivers and harbors bill as it represents the final authorization of the engineering work by which we construct and co-ordinate our great systems of waterways and harbors, which I have advocated for over five years; it was promised in the last campaign and in my recommendations to congress:

Build Segments.

"We can now build the many remaining segments of a definite canalization of our river systems through which modern barge trains of 10,000 to 15,000 tons of burden can operate systematically through the midwest and to the Gulf of Mexico, and through the lakes to the Atlantic. The system, when completed, will have 12,000 miles of waterways and will give waterway connection between such great cities as New Orleans, Memphis, Knoxville, Chattanooga, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Sioux City, Keokuk, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, Evansville, Cincinnati, Wheeling and Pittsburgh. Through the Great Lakes and the Erie canal many of these points will have access to central New York and the Atlantic. By its authorization for deepening of lake channels we shall support the present commerce of the Great Lakes and make preparation for ocean shipping by the ultimate deepening of the St. Lawrence. It authorizes numerous improvements in our harbors.

"It is a long view plan for the future. It will require many years to complete its construction. I do not propose that we should proceed in a haphazard manner, but that we should approach the problem on sound engineering lines, completing the main trunk systems and gradually extending the work outward along the lateral rivers.

"Some of the items authorized have not yet been recommended by the engineers, and, of course, they will not be undertaken unless they are so recommended.

"The bill does not call for any increase in the budget for this fiscal year, the appropriations having been provided by which work will be pushed at all available points in assistance to the temporary unemployment situation.

"I have, in co-operation with Secretary Hurley, established during the past year a new organization for the conduct of these works. In this organization we have created under General Lytle Brown eight separate divisions, headed by responsible directing engineers, as follows:

Great Lakes Division—Colonel E. M. Markham.

North Atlantic Division—Colonel W. J. Borden.

South Atlantic Division—Colonel H. B. Ferguson.

Gulf Division—Lieutenant Colonel Mark Brook.

North Pacific Division—Colonel G. Sukesli.

China Groups Locked In Bitter Struggle

SHANGHAI, July 4.—(AP)—China's civil war raged fiercely today in Honan province with victory uncertain, while bandits murdered hundreds at Yochow in Hunan.

Nationalist dispatches reported the government left wing hurled back northern rebels almost to their Kaifeng headquarters. Seizing important positions, the nationalists dug in, preparatory to expected capture of the city.

Eastward of Kaifeng, however, rebels asserted they defeated the nationalists, forcing them to retreat in great disorder from near the Chihli province border. Recovering lost ground, the rebels drove government troops eastward.

Meanwhile, bandit hordes 400 miles south rolled over Yochow in Hunan, massacring hundreds. They looted the city, recently recaptured from southern rebels by nationalists, and burned most of it.

Foreigners fled before arrival of British and American gunboats from Hankow. Three American missionaries who arrived at Hankow on a Japanese steamer were Miss Erna Flatter, of Wausau, Miss.; Miss Sarah E. Krick, Reading, Pa., and the Rev. Sterling Whitener, of Hickory, N. C.

Other brigands fired upon foreign steamers from both banks of the Yangtse river. Vessels were subjected to heavy rifle fire while passing through rapids above Yankow. They may be forced to suspend operation.

REPRESENTATIVES PLAN FLOOD CONTROL STUDY

Members of House Committee Will Make Close Inspection.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—Members of the house flood control committee prepared today to make a close inspection of the work on the Jadwin flood control project on their own initiative with a view to formulating legislation designed to liberalize the act of 1928 to permit revision of the plan.

Although congress adjourned without providing funds for the trip, Chairman Reid and members of his committee decided to go ahead with the inspection urgently requested by dwellers in the lower Mississippi river valley.

Committee members planned to make the trip at their own expense, beginning July 14 at New Orleans, to search into criticisms presented throughout their extended hearings on proposals to amend the $325,000,000 flood control project.

Revision of the plan has been urged by residents of the Boeuf and Atchafalaya basins who outlined again the argument presented to congress first in 1850 that the process by which the country above is relieved "is also that by which the country below is ruined."

Major General Lytle Brown, chief of army engineers, indorsed the Jadwin plan as "fundamentally sound" but emphasized that some revision was necessary.

The inspection trip will be opened at a meeting with the Mississippi River Flood Control Association at New Orleans. The committee then proposes to go over the outlined Boeuf and Atchafalaya floodways, and to inspect the progress made on the Bonnet Carre spillway near New Orleans.

The Atchafalaya floodway, extending roughly from Leville, La., down the Atchafalaya river to the gulf, would be virtually 16 miles wide, it has been estimated, at high flood stages. The committee was advised that approximately 40,000 people live in the floodway and backwater area which would be affected.

The Boeuf floodway, extending for 35 miles in total length above and below Arkansas City, Ark., encompasses 1,440,000 acres with 1,085,000 acres in the backwater area. The average width of the floodway is estimated at 13 miles.

Also, the committee wishes to look into complaints of residents of Kentucky and Tennessee on the eastern shore of the Mississippi that the Jadwin plan creates a flood basin of thousands of acres on their shore to protect the west side of the river. They urged that the plan be revised to give them protection.

The tentative itinerary of the committee contemplates visiting Vicksburg on July 20 after inspecting the river below that city, thence continuing north to arrive at Memphis for a meeting July 23, and to finish the trip at Cape Girardeau, Mo., July 26.

Kansas City Gas Firm Faces Rum Indictment

KANSAS CITY, July 4.—(AP)—William L. Van Deventer, United States district attorney, today said he would seek to indict the Kansas City Gas Company as "a manufacturer of liquor" in connection with the recent confiscation of an 800-gallon still in the basement of a garage here.

Van Deventer said the gas company's meter was in full view of the still and he considered the company culpable in that no report had been made by its representatives concerning the liquor manufacturing apparatus.

Water, electricity and gas are necessary in operation of stills, Van Deventer said, adding that the gas bill for the place where the still was located amounted to $138 for May.

"That should give anybody an idea that something was wrong at that place," he said. "The Kansas City Gas Company's conduct has been such as to aid and abet the men found in possession of the still." The company if indicted and found guilty could be fined up to $10,000. Three negroes, Sam Harris, Robert Lewis and Luther Robinson, were arrested in the basement.

Fair Week-End Is Seen for City By Forecaster

Prospect for a fair week-end was held out by the U. S. weather bureau in the forecast made Friday. Today will be fair, it was said, with a temperature in the afternoon of about 90 degrees.

The high temperature Friday slightly exceeded expectations. The mercury in the afternoon ran to 90 degrees, about 3 degrees higher than had been anticipated. A constant breeze through the day, however, made it comfortable. Low temperature was 67 degrees.

DR. SUTTON INSTALLED AS N. E. A. PRESIDENT

Ceremony Marks Close of Covention at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 4.—(AP)—Dr. Willis A. Sutton, of Atlanta, Ga., who taught Latin to Bobby Jones and who established a national reputation in the educational world by promoting health work among school children, was installed today as president of the National Education Association.

Dr. Sutton is superintendent of the Atlanta school system. The association's representative assembly gave him a comfortable majority over Joseph Rosier, president of the Fairmount State Normal school at Fairmont, W. Va. He received 604 and Rosier 448 votes.

Installation of the new president and a patriotic program today at Ohio stadium marked the close of the association's sixty-eighth annual convention.

Dr. Sutton, 51 years old, was born in Wilkes county, Georgia, and was reared on a southern plantation. Most of his life has been devoted to the schools. When Bobby Jones, the great golf wizard, was struggling with Latin declensions at Technical High school at Atlanta he received encouragement from Dr. Sutton, who also took a great interest in Bobbie's favorite sport.

Dr. Sutton established a wide reputation as a promoter of health programs which included medical and dental inspections and regular health instruction in the classrooms.

Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle, of Lincoln, Neb., the retiring president, becomes first vice president. Eleven other vice presidents were elected. They are: John W. Abercrombie, Montgomery, Ala.; George C. Baker, Morrestown, N. J.; Jessie Gray, president of the Philadelphia Teachers' Association; Florence Hale, of Augusta, Maine; W. N. Holmes, superintendent of schools at Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Eugenia West Jones, of Los Angeles, a classroom teacher; Elizabeth McCormick, school principal at Superior, Wis.; Francisco Viecarrando, assistant superintendent of education at San Juan, Porto Rico; E. H. Whitney, superintendent of schools at Portland, Ore.; Dr. Ernest W. Butterfield, of the state department of education at New Haven, Conn., and Amy Hinrichs, of New Orleans.

Henry Lester Smith, of Bloomington, Ind., dean of the school of education, Indiana University, was re-elected treasurer.

Sixty-five thousand seats were available at Ohio stadium for spectators at the patriotic exercises. The principal speaker was John H. Finley, literary editor of the New York Times.

HUNTER WILL ACT IN SUTTON'S ABSENCE.

Arrangements have been made for the smooth operation of the Atlanta public school system during the periods Dr. Willis A. Sutton's new duties as president of the National Education Association take him from the city, it was said Friday by Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, president of the board of education.

Dr. Burns and other educational leaders of Atlanta expressed gratification that Dr. Sutton had been elected to the office.

H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent in charge of high schools, will act in Dr. Sutton's place in his absences, it was said.

Holland Government Opposes Briand Plan

PARIS, July 4.—(AP)—The government of the Netherlands today informed the French foreign office of its belief that the ground had not been sufficiently prepared for a federation of European states, as recently suggested in a world-wide memorandum of Foreign Minister Briand.

Holland submitted a formal reply to the former premier's proposal, which was made public today.

The Dutch officials expressed a lively appreciation of France's initiative, but suggested that further exchanges must take place before the project could proceed.

The memorandum submitted today expressed fear that such a federation might prove an embarrassment to the League of Nations and that continental grouping might, in practice, aggravate differences between the continents.

The Holland foreign office in another reservation, takes issue with M. Briand's suggestion that the proposed federation should be based first on a political accord and then upon economic grounds. Holland feels, the memorandum says, that regulation of political issues is not necessary to a general lowering of customs duties which by implication it stresses as the most important problem confronting Europe today.

In official circles the reply was taken as encouraging. It was considered that the objections raised would be in no way difficult to overcome. French officials pointed out that Foreign Minister Briand always considered that such a federation must be grafted upon the structure of the League of Nations and could not succeed if in any way inimical.

To the idea that the federation might aggravate the differences between continents, the French today replied that it would manifestly reduce the number of problems separating them.

Prison Tense as Time For Execution Nears

CANON CITY, Colo., July 4.—(AP) His family removed, a guard has been thrown around the home of Warden F. E. Crawford, as part of the precautionary program in connection with the execution of Ralph Fleagle. Fleagle is a member of the gang convicted of the $200,000 robbery af a Lamar, Colo., bank two years ago which led to the slaying of four men by the bandits.

Authorities have expressed belief that Jake Fleagle, fugitive brother of the condemned bandit, will make a bold, last-minute effort to rescue his brother.

BORGLUM UNVEILS HEAD OF WASHINGTON

Giant Memorial on Cliff in Black Hills Rises 6,200 Feet.

RAPID CITY, N. D., July 4.—(AP) Gutzon Borglum's gigantic face of George Washington, carved on Mount Rushmore's granite cliff, today was revealed as a reminder through the centuries of the historical foundation of the United States.

In simple impressive Independence Day ceremonies in the heart of South Dakota's Black Hills, an audience of 2,500 witnessed the unveiling of the 60-foot head of the first president of the United States, the first unit of Mount Rushmore national memorial.

On the nation's birthday, a patriotic note was sounded by the speakers in the mountain setting near the center of the North American continent.

"America's shrine for political democracy," the monument was called by Joseph S. Cullinan, of Houston, Texas, chairman of the federal commission in charge of Borglum's massive project.

Borglum, in his presentation speech, said it was a monument to the aspirations of a great people, not to individual men. Declaring Washington's head would remain on the mountain for half a million years, the sculptor told the audience that the monument would include the heads of Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, along with a brief history of the nation's founding and expansion to be written by former President Calvin Coolidge. These will be drilled on the same historic scale on Rushmore's 700-foot face.

Washington's head appears high on the granite cliff at an elevation of 6,200 feet above sea level. Pine and spruce trees are dense at the foot and stretch for miles over the rugged Black Hills. The stone face is easily recognized as that of the first president, and is visible for a great distance.

Ceremonies were held at noon today on the veranda of Borglum's studio on Doane mountain, almost under Rushmore memorial. The crowd gathered on boulders and under trees in a rustic setting.

Doane Robinson, of Pierre, S. D., who first proposed the Black Hills memorial, described it a success without the necessity of completion of the figures of three other presidents.

Cabinet Wives May Vacation at Rapidan Camp

BY BESS FURMAN.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—With uncertainty the only thing certain about official vacationing, the interest of cabinet wives now centers on "Cabinet Camp."

The tentative plans of the president, the doubtful duration of the special senate session, the insistent demands for speechmaking combine in upsetting arrangements for auto tours, boat trips, and camping excursions into far places.

"We plan to replan—we only wish we knew!"

Such being the situation, "Cabinet Camp" could make no more opportune entrance into the official scene. Outfitted for camp life only this week, it now awaits the cabinet members whenever they choose to make overnight and week-end trips. And if their wives so choose, they may remain for weeks on the Rapidan, as Mrs. Hoover is now doing.

"Cabinet Camp," new and near neighbors to President Hoover's lodge in the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia, is a co-operative concern. All secretaries share its privileges and responsibilities. Only sparsest furnishings have been provided thus far, that it may gradually grow to be an expression of the tastes of those who dwell there for a season.

Situated in a dense wood—oak, maple, chestnut, dogwood, laurel, ferns—its rambling main cabin and two sleeping cabins add picturesqueness to the auto trail two miles this side of the president's camp. So close is it to the Rapidan river, it would be possible to fish from two of the porches.

Cheer for chilly nights is promised by two huge fireplaces in the main cabin and one in each sleeping cabin. Comforts of civilization are assured by an electric system which eventually will operate kitchen range, refrigerator and water heater. But that is still a project. More important at present is the camp larder, this week stocked with rations to meet any emergency.

Mrs. Hyde and Mrs. Wilbur already have visited the camp.

Mrs. Brown, wife of a postmaster general who happens to be a crack camp cook, expressed keenest anticipation.

"No vacation the past two summers," she sighed. "I did so want to auto trip, or a boat trip—but—brightening, "others have to stay in warm Washington—and we'll have the new camp!"

To the wife of the secretary of the interior the camp will be reminiscent of Palo Alto, where Wilburs and Hoovers sought cabins high in the red woods for recreation.

Mrs. Hurley and Mrs. Stimson, remaining with their husbands here, continued to hope for cherished trips afar, and were glad for a country spot several degrees cooler than the capital city.

Other cabinet wives will make the acquaintance of the camp later. Mrs. Davis, with her five children, is vacationing at Atlantic City. Mrs. Mitchell is at her St. Paul home. Mrs. Adams will be in Concord, Mass., all summer. Mrs. Lamont will remain at her summer home in Ridgemont, Lake Park, Illinois, until October.

Gang Victim's Body Found Burning in Oil

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—The flaming body of Henry Brinkman, ex-convict, was found on the sidewalk of a quiet Bronx street today, dumped there, police say, by unidentified underworld enemies who had shot him through the head.

A taxi driver saw what looked like a bundle of rags burning on the sidewalk in front of a stone yard and close to several houses. He investigated and found that the bundle was in fact an oil soaked body.

Police believe Brinkman was killed elsewhere, his body covered with gasoline and then driven to the place where it was found. Investigators found no likely clue in anything he had done or the people he had seen.

GEORGE AND THE TREATY.

The president has called an extra session of the senate to meet Monday for the consideration of the London naval treaty, which has already been reported favorably.

This treaty is pregnant with possibilities for the successful culmination of the efforts towards world peace and should receive prompt and favorable consideration by the senate.

Senator Walter F. George, in supporting the favorable report of the committee, states that the treaty, while somewhat disappointing in that it does not go far enough in the definite limitation of naval armament, is a decided move toward disarmament.

In effect the treaty is, more than anything else, an overture towards future agreements which will materially lighten the burden being carried by the peoples of the world in supporting unnecessarily large navies.

The naval competition between the great powers of the world, for the past few decades, has been fearfully costly, and it has put an unnecessary burden upon the taxpayers of all these countries.

The intricacies of European diplomacy make it necessary to advance slowly in international affairs, but as pointed out by Senator George the treaty is a definite step toward world peace. Its provisions are of so mild a nature and so unentangling in their commitments that only the most rabid of jingos could object to it.

Senator George, as a member of the senate foreign relations committee, lends powerful support to the ratification of the measure, and in this he correctly represents the sentiment of his state.

HOOVER'S "SPLENDID MISERY."

If President Hoover has had time recently to inform and delight himself by reading the letters of Thomas Jefferson he must have found himself in hearty agreement with the great Virginian in one particular. In 1797 Jefferson wrote to Elbridge Gerry that "the second office of the government is honorable and easy; the first is but a splendid misery." Jefferson was then the second vice president and Gerry afterwards was the fifth in order, but never attained to the "splendid misery" which Jefferson enjoyed from 1801 to 1809.

Anyhow, considering what has happened to President Hoover in the past 16 months, and is still happening, he doubtless agrees that Jefferson correctly described what the presidency may mean to some occupants of the office. Many of them have, indeed, found it little more than a "splendid misery" and the only now living ex-president, Calvin Coolidge, openly says that he covets no more of it.

In President Hoover's case those public men in both parties who do not like his presence in the office have done a plenty to make his tenure up to date a distinctly "splendid misery." There is no secret whatever of the fact that the most potential republican leaders were chagrined by his nomination at Kansas City, that they had to support him of necessity for party regularity, that they do not want him to succeed himself in a second term, and that, as far as they dare go without openly wrecking the party, they are doing what they dare to wreck his popularity and personal policies.

It is not necessary here to recapitulate the many things they have done in congress and in the states to make the people look upon Hoover as an inept leader and an administrative failure. It is enough that they have almost completely horned him out of congressional matters and carried into action many things distasteful to him. They have only deferred to him in things like the export debentures and World War veterans' relief when they doubted the popularity of overriding him and believed they could detour him to their purposes by other measures.

There have been instances when a president similarly beset upon his flanks, has come through the muck with strength and flying colors. It is possible that President Hoover may do that later on, but at present the political prophets do not give him an even chance, in spite of his high office and its great powers. He will have to beat back to high popularity against the strongest of political head winds.

MISQUOTED OR MISTAKEN.

There is evidently a mistake somewhere in the report of a decision by Judge Manton, of the circuit court of appeals at New York. In the matter of the refusal of the federal district courts to admit to naturalization a couple of Canadians who refused to take the oath of allegiance to the United States unless with a reservation not to take up arms for the country in a case of war, Judge Manton reverses the lower courts.

The news service report says that Judge Manton "quoted a passage from the constitution setting forth that the 'rights of conscience are, indeed, beyond the just reach of any human power,'" but there is no such passage in the constitution of the United States.

It is unquestionably true that every person is entitled to his "rights of conscience," but he is not usually allowed to assert those rights as superior to the rights of organized society, and its supreme government, and yet claim the privileges and protection of that government. He should be advised to seek a society and government that will permit to nullify its laws in the name of "conscience" and escape the obligation imposed upon citizens generally to uphold and defend the society.

No great statesman was ever more committed to the assertion and defense of inalienable human rights, including freedom of conscience and religion, and yet Jefferson and none of his compeers ever allowed that any man could be suffered to oppose his "conscience" to the just demands of the government under whose sovereignty he sought rights and refuge.

Under the condition approved by Judge Manton every bootlegger and rum-smuggler in the United States could plead his "conscientious reservation" to the demands of the prohibition amendment of the constitution. Obviously Judge Manton is grossly misquoted, or is manifestly in error as to the constitutional law of the land respecting naturalization.

TWO WHERE ONE SHOULD BE.

In the current issue of Good Words, official publication of the Atlanta federal penitentiary, it is revealed that there are now housed in that institution 4,047 prisoners.

This in a prison designed and equipped to normally care for 2,000 inmates.

It means that prisoners are jammed in cells like sardines in a can; that others are sleeping on improvised bunks and cots on the floors of hallways; that there is little opportunity for rehabilitation work; and, probably worst of all, that there is enforced idleness as the result of insufficient work to keep hundreds of these inmates busy.

It is the duty of the government to take every step possible to remake the lives—to give new viewpoint to warped minds—to those who, as a result of having strayed from the straight and narrow path, are its wards while they make restitution for their offenses.

Instead, the crowded conditions of our penitentiaries are resulting in idle hands and brains busy with the thoughts of "the devil's workshop."

This condition exists in practically all of the federal penitentiaries and it is a national disgrace.

When a Hollywood actress cries "fore" she means four. She isn't playing golf, but progressive matrimony.

Senator Joe Grundy has not yet sent to the printer his "Tariff Handbook for American Farmers." Why the untimely delay?

Secretary Mellon is happy to tender his sympathies to Attorney General Mitchell, to whom he has transferred the prohibition elephant.

Frank Loesch, of the law enforcement commission, finding that many bootleggers are recent immigrants, recommends deportation for their bad deportment.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Stresemann's Last Words.

Two or three days before his death the late Dr. Gustave Stresemann talked to a German newspaperman on the subject of the United States of Europe. "There is little doubt," said the foreign minister, "if the present organization of Europe had been the work of the director of some industrial undertaking he would have been fired out long ago by the assembled shareholders. Everywhere," he continued, "one sees rationalization and progress. Banks merge their business; industries, instead of combatting one another, ally themselves, only the European states remain opposed to progress. The first step would be to reduce tariffs and do away altogether with visas. When one comes to think how often a traveler must be delayed if he goes for instance from Warsaw to Madrid, the whole thing becomes a ridiculous farce." Dr. Stresemann, it is now also revealed, did not think a united Europe would be looked upon with antagonism in America. "To the contrary," he said, "America will prefer to deal with a united continent than with a disunited Europe." The German statesman drew the line, however, at the idea that there ever could be produced one single culture out of the many in Europe at present. But again when the objection was made that a certain statesman had declared there would not be a United States of Europe for three centuries to come, Dr. Stresemann exclaimed: "What does he know about it? The idea has been launched. It will germinate in the spirit of men!" The pity is that the same Stresemann is no longer there to serve with that admirable sincerity in the propagation of the great ideal of peace.

No Proof.

That experiment of Mr. Jacques Gordon, well-known violinist of Chicago, who set out to prove that the general public has no taste for good music, does not seem entirely satisfactory. This is what Mr. Gordon did according to press dispatches. He complained bitterly that most people who attend concerts in our larger cities, on both sides of the ocean, do so only because the price of admission is high and because it's fashionable to be seen there, in other words they frequent concerts out of pure snobism. To prove this assertion he disguised himself. Dressed in rags, and equipped with a pair of black glasses in order to escape recognition by friends, he went into the streets with his authentic Stradivarius and began to play pieces from his own concert repertoire. After playing for half an hour he had an audience of about a hundred and had collected about ten dollars. "You see," exclaimed Mr. Gordon, "I was right!" But if one considers that he managed to attract the attention of a hundred people, who were not one might well suppose, specifically musical; people furthermore who did not expect to hear a violin solo in an American city like Chicago where time is money and receive ten dollars to boot at the end of half an hour that's twenty in an hour, this is not so bad. We happen to know scores of young artists who do not receive half that sum for organized concerts on playing for the radio in various European cities.

The New King.

The most bewildering rumors about the new Rumania monarch are in circulation in Europe. Some of these seem to follow precisely in that vein and atmosphere of opera-bouffe, with which Carol of Hohenzollern has hitherto been associated. The prediction is wide that he will some day unite the Hungarian and the Rumanian throne and reconstitute a new dual empire on the Blue Danube. Most of the liberal papers in Europe foresee a military dictatorship, on the line now in vogue in Jugo-Slavia. They base this view on the pretorian role the army has always played in Rumania politics. And then, there is of course, the king's own announcement in his first proclamation in which he mentioned the word "fascio" (bundle), which has in our time become the emblem of the black shirts of Italy, after having been a symbol of power in ancient Rome. Another prophecy encountered here and there in European publications gives Carol II an international role. He is to be the leader of a great drive against his neighbors, the soviets. In time to come, this will assume the character of a new holy alliance against the reds of Moscow. So say the prophets, who already vaunt the efficiency of the Rumanian army. On the other hand the possibility exists that Carol becomes a good king, in spite of the maze of intrigues that are woven about the Rumanian court with its almost Byzantian flair for plot and counter plot.

Moroccan Ruler Honors Memory Of French Dead

PARIS, July 3.—(UN)—Sidi Mohammed, young man of Morocco, sultan of 5,000,000 Islamic subjects in Africa laid a wreath on the tomb of the French Unknown Soldier at 11 a. m. Thursday, thereby starting his program on his present sojourn in Paris.

Picturesque in his white bernouse, the flowing desert headdress, the sultan, a youth of 19, drove through the streets and boulevards to the tomb as thousands lined the way. Although he is in Paris "incognitio," the sultan's garb and his entourage make him an outstanding figure wherever he goes.

He had more fun at a German circus Thursday night than at more formal functions which attended the first day of what has been termed his educational tour of France.

The Sultan Sidi Mohammed, commander of the Islamic believers and Morocco's first Monogamic sultan since the Alaquites rose to the throne three centuries ago, got a thrill out of the circus, which he particularly wanted to see.

He apepared to be an unassuming youth, this young man who, unlike his predecessors and most wealthy Moors, has but one wife, his cousin. He does not keep a harem, in the usual sense of that Islamic institution. However, his palace is filled with concubines, according to tradition.

So far, he has declined to accept any European customs. His sandaled feet and fez make him a striking figure among the people of Paris.

Since they do not count as wives and, consequently do not interfere with his Monogamic standing, Sidi Mohammed does tolerate the filling of his palaces with concubines. Most of them have been gifts from the chiefs of loyal tribes. He left them and his wife at Rabat. There is an infant heir, also, Mulai, in Morocco.

Letters From a Bald-Headed Dad to a Flapper Daughter

BY ROBERT QUILLEN

My Dear Louise:

I have heard you say that the prospect of teaching school after you finish college doesn't thrill you, and in the absence of further evidence I take it for granted that you haven't yet decided what you wish to do to earn your salt.

ROBERT QUILLEN.

At seventeen you still have ample time to consider many possibilities; but you must reach a decision before one is forced on you by chance, and I wish to tell you a little fable that may help to point the right way.

Once upon a time, as all good fables should begin, a messenger from the gods appeared to men and told them of a mysterious mountain far away, across deserts and wild rivers and black forests, where they could find a spring whose waters would heal all human ills.

Of course the men at once organized a party to attempt the long journey and find the spring, and almost everybody who could get away set forth one morning full of high resolve and a great desire to be useful.

All went well for a day or two, and then things began to happen.

It developed that numbers of men had joined the party in the hope of getting rich along the way by selling trinkets to the heathens encountered, and these frequently held up the march while they bargained and traded.

Others were intent on being leaders, though they had no idea which way to go, and these quarreled among themselves while the caravan stood still.

Still others broke down on the way, or strayed and were lost, or followed paths that led nowhere and had to be brought back, until at last everybody forgot the purpose of the journey and each man thought only of himself, as he had done at home, so that further travel was abandoned and the miraculous spring never was found.

Well, the history of the human race shows that it has been journeying a long time in quest of perfection.

It began in the jungle, naked and ignorant and brutal, and Destiny led it through many trials and sufferings to its present half-way station.

Whatever the hidden purpose behind all things, it seems clear enough that the duty and high calling and great adventure of man is to struggle on, doing his utmost to overcome ignorance and superstition and selfishness and greed, until the race at last is civilized.

There are ten thousand things to distract and interrupt and delay him, and the stupid hinder the journey because they don't know what it's all about; but those who understand keep pegging away and each generation sees a little more progress.

You, my dear, must be a help or a hindrance—a good scout sharing the great adventure, or a drag to hold it back.

Lead, if you can, but in any case join the caravan if only to curry the camels.

Love,
DAD.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

Special Dispatch to The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 4.—Cyril Maude's first talking picture, "Grumpy," which was a studio triumph when officials first glimpsed it, went over big with a group of local critics who privately viewed it last night.

It convinces us that subtle comedy characterization, minus the frankly vulgar lines which have come to be an inseparable part of most of our modern comedy, can keep an audience chuckling over the allotted time of a feature-length picture and leave them with a sense of refreshment and charm and aware of a magnificent exposition of art.

The lovable old tartar, "Grumpy" has been done in silents years ago. Theodore Roberts made it, but Cyril Maude was the original creator of the stage role. A delightful cast, which includes Philips Holmes as the boy, Frances Dade at the girl, and Halliwell Hobbes as Grumpy's "Gentleman's Gentleman," are a nice balance to the excellent artistry of Maude.

Musicals continue to hold disfavor among talkie magnates. The theme song has either been joked out or played out long ago. But even when producers came to this conclusion, they had not finished with music in talking pictures.

Some of the most pretentious musical efforts contemplated for this year have been held up or are being delayed on one pretext or another. Thousands of new songs have come out of the Hollywood factories since music invaded the screen. They have been good songs, too. A lot of them. The rest have not differed from the routine stuff which we have fallen heir to in other years when songs were made in New York city.

But the public wants to hear some good comedy, some serious drama and some ladies and gentlemen intended for speaking purposes only, doing what fate intended them for instead of walking to the front of the camera and painfully revealing their musical lacks, and their throat furnishings.

A village exponent of the slimmer silhouette gains her results by the somewhat unique process of walking up 100 steps five times a day. Five hundred steps in all with a loss of one pound a day.

Yes, she eats generously. For my part I'll do without the cream and butter and patronize the lifts.

No sign of Mary Pickford's picture being resumed as yet. Mary is in New York, but nobody knows why. When a movie star travels in that direction of a July you can bet there is business afoot. There are better summer resorts near to hand.

One of the best gags in a comedy being made in the village is the one about the lad who had two dates with a girl in one night.

"Whaddja mean, two dates?"

Eddie Horton has been looking for a play. So the big shorts of the studio writing staffs have burned the midnight oil getting one ready for him. These lads draw salaries which would make the average author turn pale with envy.

But their plays, it seems, are awful. Over 150 of these rare manuscripts have been read and returned with somewhat embarrassed thanks by the comedian. Perhaps to save his face he'll look farther afield for his next comedy venture before the footlights.

Horton is beginning to believe that legend about plays being pretty bad in the aggregate. Hollywood dramatists turned scenarist are proving it to him.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Questions from Constitution readers are answered daily by the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, radio minister of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Dr. Cadman seeks to answer inquiries that appear to be representative of the trends of thought in the many letters which he receives.

Canton, Ohio.

This new Hindoo leader, Krishnamurti, says that "if you would discover Truth you must for a time withdraw from the world." How can a man with a wife and six children, living necessarily close to the daily grind, have any hope of finding the truth? Doesn't it look as if only those with plenty of money are in a position to withdraw from the world and know the truth?

I took the trouble to trace your quotation and found it in Krishnamurti's "Life in Freedom" (p. 14). His "withdrawal from the world," however, took the form of a vacation trip to the inspiring mountain scenery of California. Some day you may be able to practice this kind of solitude for a week and get your chance at truth finding under similar surroundings.

But do not imagine that the essentials of existence can be revealed in a cloistered retreat. Self-isolation is accomplished by meditation either in a crowded center or in a cave in the Himalayan ranges. Wordsworth, the Apostle of Nature, told his fellowmen from the little village of Grasmere that:

"The world is too much with us;
Getting and spending we lay waste our powers."

In accordance with custom, prophets and thinkers of former times repaired to the desert. St. John the Baptist frequented the wild fastnesses of the Jordan valley, and the Christ whom St. John heralded retired into the Galilean hills to pray. St. Paul sojourned in Arabia's wilderness. Newman and Martineau dwelt in cities but sought truth in the seclusion of their book-lined studies. If you can concentrate you may forget the world which is surging around you.

Find a quiet spot free from interruption, and you are on the open road to truth if you seek it with an unprejudiced mind. Of course, you need materials and methods in using them. The best books should be at hand for study. Begin by drawing up a list of truths about which you have no doubt. As you consider these other vistas will come upon your horizon and ultimately you will arrive at the formulations you seek.

Your wife and children are not a hindrance when rightly regarded. On the contrary, they are a splendid spur to your examination of life and its purposes. There is more spiritual reality in a mother bending over her baby's cradle than in many a ponderous and learned volume of theology. Begin with a study of that mother's devotion which you can observe every day in your own home as the starting point for your quest of the great truths of life.

Queens Village, N. Y.

You have previously stated that a private citizen of this country, Salmon O. Levinson, was the original author of the Paris Pact. Do you not think it fitting that Mr. Levinson should be recognized as its author, not for purposes of ostentation, but for general information? Will you tell us something about Mr. Levinson and how he came to be so active in forwarding his project?

Here are the facts as I obtained them from the Christian Century, an outstanding religious weekly which advocated the outlawry of war for years before it was enacted by the Pact of Paris:

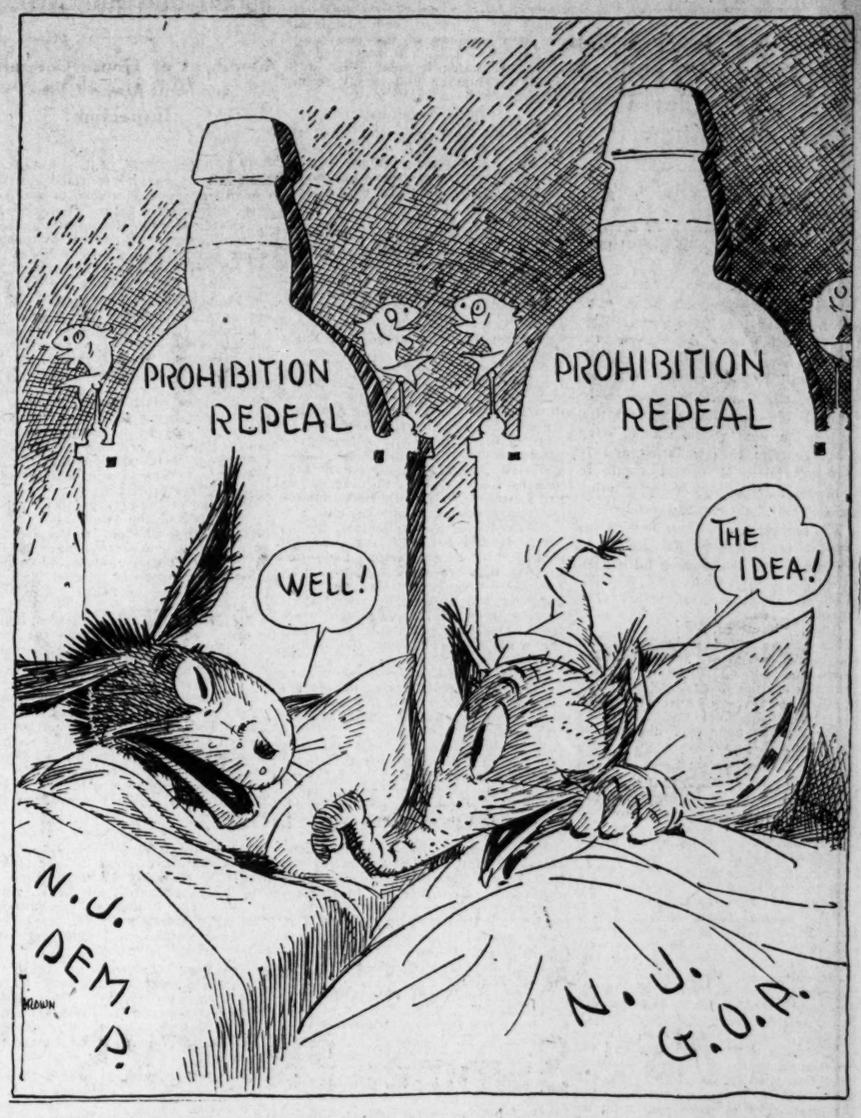

Salmon O. Levinson, an attorney residing in the city of Chicago, is the author of the idea of proceeding against war by outlawing it. He first stated his views in a magazine article which appeared in 1918, before the armistice. The first converts to the idea were the late Senator Knox, Professor John Dewey, Senator Borah, Colonel Raymond Robins, Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, Dr. John Haynes Holmes and Justice Florence E. Allen, to name only those who early devoted their pens and voices to the promulgation of the idea.

By 1927 the movement for the outlawry of war had gained such momentum in the United States that the report of it reached the ear of M. Briand, the foreign minister of France, who, on April 6, 1927, gave an interview in which he said that he would find great satisfaction in subscribing to a treaty outlawing war between France and the United States. Upon reading this statement of M. Briand, Mr. Levinson immediately left Chicago for Paris and spent several weeks in conference at Quai D'Orsay, urging the French foreign office to put M. Briand's suggestion into the form of a draft treaty and present it to the government of the United States.

He succeeded in his purpose and soon a bilateral treaty was offered to the United States government by the government of France. It was this draft treaty which Secretary of State Kellogg proposed should be made multilateral instead of bilateral. The acceptance of the multilateral proposal by 15 nations, and ultimately its acceptance by a total of 62 nations, was the realization of the idea which was first conceived by Mr. Levinson, and interpreted by him to American public opinion through the movement which he inspired.

Waking Up in Twin Beds

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

NINETY YEARS OF AMERICA IS A CENTURY OF FRANCE.

Paris correspondence in a New York paper recently told of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of membership in the French Academy of Medicine of one Dr. Alexandre Gueniot, who is 98 years old. The venerable doctor retired at 75, but has been engaged in compiling a large work on longevity. In an interview he said men eat too much meat and not enough fruits and vegetables. He advanced the theory that men generally do not breathe deeply enough. A healthy person, he estimated, should fill his lungs with from two to four quarts of air, fresh air, at each breath; whereas he thought the average person doesn't take in more than a quart of air at a breath. The doctor thought the average span of life could be lengthened to 100 years or more by proper breathing.

I cited the curious idea here and pointed out that as a matter of fact a normal adult breathes a pint of air in each ordinary quiet inspiration, and only by an effort can he inhale an additional 3 or 3 1-2 pints. Moreover, had the good Dr. Gueniot taken the trouble to try it out on himself, or preferably on some innocent subject, he would have learned that a minute or two of such deeper breathing is the limit, and whoever tries to keep it up longer is going to be surprised—when he comes to.

About the time the funny news item from Paris was published, I had a letter from my friend and colleague, Dr. B. F. B.—who is now in his ninetieth year and lives in New England. Dr. B— and I graduated from the same medical school, not the same class, though.

Algebra teachers and high school juniors who like algebra, if any, will doubtless be able to solve this little problem: My colleague received his medical degree 36 years before I received mine. I received mine 28 years ago. My colleague is 90. How old am I? If algebra will not give you the answer in a trice, what the hell?

This odd notion of the French savant didn't detain my friend Dr. B. F. B— very long either. I submitted the clipping for his view, and here it is:

"First I think the clipping may not have been intended as it is stated, but perhaps merely from a layman's idea. I note that many times men who have lived to a point beyond the average take especial pride in telling to what they attribute their long life. To the professional man it amounts to very little.

"Of course I know that you are right and that it would be impossible to breathe in that way. I have many times advised taking a full breath two or three times a day, but that is all.

"I read of a wise man who, when asked how to attain good old age replied 'Get a chronic disease, then you will take care of yourself.' I think the French doctor means well, but he is an extremist.

"I regard heredity as a most powerful factor in longevity."

There you are, young 'uns. My own contribution to the symposium is trivial. I just wish to say I believe a man 90 years old in America has lived longer than a man 98 years old in France. And lest the youthful reader fail to notice it, let me direct particular attention to the natural way in which my medical friend speaks of attaining GOOD old age.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Why Temperature Remains Even.

Our hygiene teacher asked the class why the body temperature is always at 98 degrees? No one could answer. So the teacher said if anybody finds out the correct answer he will give that person extra credits. So I appeal to you for the answer. (S. H.)

Answer.—I give it up. If the teacher gets the answer I wish you would tell me about it. Why does an automobile engine maintain a temperature of 180 degrees F. when running normally? It is too much for me. We know the body temperature is automatically regulated by the vasomotor part of the sympathetic nervous system. Possibly there is a special heat regulating center in the medulla or brain. But I am unable to explain why the body temperature remains at 98 to 99 F. while the body is running normally. Some animals, such as snakes, frogs, fishes, have a lower normal body temperature; others a higher normal temperature, notably birds. I don't know why.

Timely Views of Noted Americans

PERSONAL SERVICE RELATIVE TO MEDICINE.

BY RAY LYMAN WILBUR,
Secretary of the Interior.

(Ray Lyman Wilbur was born at Boonesboro, Iowa, April 13, 1875. He is a graduate of Stanford University and Cooper Medical college, later studying abroad. He holds honorary degrees from several universities. From 1900 to 1903 he was assistant professor in physiology at Stanford University, and professor of medicine there from 1909 to 1916, being dean of the school for five years. In 1916 he was made president of Stanford. He held that post until appointed secretary of the interior by President Hoover last spring. In 1917 he was chief of the conservation division, United States food administration, in Washington. He is a member of various societies and medical organizations.)

Our zoologists have stressed the importance of the division of labor in the study of animal life, particularly of the colonizing insects.

Specialization is one of the earliest manifestations of this division. Man developed such specialization early, not only because of the differences in the sexes, but also because of the jobs that had to be done with the increased range of activities that came from the development of the mind of man.

In the struggles against his enemies and in conquering his environment his mind developed. It was found desirable for some men to take on one task and others another.

This has been true from primitive periods in regard to medicine. Certain individuals arose with unique capacities. They were accepted as the healers or the medicine men.

As medicine became a science, it attracted those of certain qualities. Gradually there evolved the great profession of medicine along with other professions, such as those of theology and of law.

When the day of the sciences arrived, the profession of medicine was practically remade. It began to transfer its interest to the causes of disease and to the care of the body rather than to methods of treatment, which had been for the most part the rallying points of the various groups which developed within the profession of medicine.

We have now reached a stage where our civilization can only be maintained through the services of experts, and where one of our principal functions is the training of more of them. Our great system of public education brings to light those who have the qualities desired, and our colleges, universities and medical schools train them.

Medicine compels a degree of personal service which can be done on no other basis. But while medicine is engrossing and offers interest and stimulation beyond the usual amount for those adapted to it, it leads into the great field of public as well as personal service.

Society needs the general interest of the medical profession in its welfare.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

FORCES OUTSIDE OURSELVES.

Anyone who thinks of the universe and the natural laws which govern it feels something of the great power which has created the world and which operates it. But do we think often enough of the amazing fact that this same power which created the universe and which runs it is the same power that a human life can use if it is properly adjusted to the world?

Speaking to graduates of Ohio State University, President Soper, of Ohio Wesleyan, said: "Every man who has caught the vision of a new world, and throws himself into its attainment is consciously or unconsciously believing in and working with the forces outside himself which are making for the same ends."

RADIO HEAT.

Research director at the General Electric laboratories says radio may be developed to heat the body instead of the whole room. With no furnaces and no radiators—and with no coal bill—life might be just one pleasant summer afternoon. Perhaps the radio programs may come to have something to do with the heat.

PRISON GRADUATES.

With gray suits for gowns and skull caps for mortar boards a class of California convicts has been graduated from a vocational school. An experiment in education is being tried at San Quentin penitentiary. Convicts, when their terms are up, will have learned jobs. Perhaps most men keep on going to the bad after they leave prison not because they want to be criminals but because they find few jobs they can hold. Like men who never went to prison they need education and the knowledge of a trade. Prisons come so far from reform that every experiment that may build bad men into good is worth watching.

LETTING THE PEOPLE KNOW.

Montana insurance men are thoughtful. They have decided on a campaign of advertising to convince people of the value of insurance. Wisely, they pick newspapers as their medium. Much that passes for hard times might pass away if more people were told what they need and where to get it. Most of us have to be told many times what is good for us before we accept the idea. Advertisers will do well to understand the resistance of human nature.

JOY OF THE CHRISTIAN.

Text: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God." Romans 8:16.

The foundation of any Christian's joy is the clear knowledge that he is a child of God.

This exuberant joy, in former years, was often voiced in the song "I'm the Child of a King."

Someone has written very beautifully, in this same vein, as follows:

"Heaven above is softer blue,
Earth around is sweeter green!
Something lies in every hue,
Christless eyes have never seen;
Birds with gladder songs overflow,
Flowers with deeper beauties shine,
Since I know, as now I know,
I am His, and He is mine."

In these lines there is well expressed the transformations in the appearance of nature and, indeed, of life in general, to one who has arrived at the definite and secure knowledge that one is a child of God.

Horace Bushnell, with his usual penetrating spiritual insight, says, "If you have looked despairingly upon this world, believe in God, and your despair will give way to courage and hope.

"Doubtless your sins are strong and you are weak, but Christ is here, and Christ is not weak."

In these words, the great American theologian shows the child of God how to find comfort in the assurance of the nearness, the strength and the willing helpfulness of the god of love who is revealed in Jesus Christ.

That other, and more recent saint, Dr. J. H. Jowett, reviewing his first pastorate, which was at Newcastle, England, said: "I have learned this lesson, that sin is mighty, but God is mightier; I have learned that man is impotent himself; I have learned that no man need be regarded as beyond redemption; I have learned that, for the ruined life, there is restoration, a power, a peace and a joy unspeakable; I have learned that the care and misery of this church are in the homes where Christ is absent; I have learned that the happiest and most beautiful homes connected with this congregation are the homes of the redeemed.

"These are the lessons of my ministry."

Neither Dr. Jowett himself nor his congregation could have learned these lessons or shared these experiences without the conscious assurance that he and they were both alike the children of God.

JIM THE CONQUEROR

By PETER B. KYNE

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT.

About an hour later a coroner's jury trooped into Don Jaime's room and listened to his story of the killing. The ranger added his testimony, and the foreman of the jury looked at his fellow jurors.

"Don't seem to be anything mysterious about this case, boys," he announced. "All those in favor of rendering a verdict of suicide hold up their right hands. All up? We, the jury, find that the deceased came to his death at the hands of Don Jaime Miguel Higuenes and that the said Higuenes acted in self-defense and cannot be charged with any crime worse than justifiable homicide."

The jury retired, and Ken Hobart returned to his employer.

"Well, I've wired my resignation. It ought to reach the governor before the office closes, and his wire of acceptance will come to me in your care. I've hired an automobile—at your expense, Don Jaime—and am on my way to the ranch. I'll send the trailer in after our horses in the morning. They're at ranger headquarters. That cook of Antrim's is bound to have taken the news out to his people . . . I'd better be at the ranch in the event of hostilities. The wildest sheep-herder will generally listen to reason from a ranger—and I'll be a ranger until my resignation is accepted and I have turned in my shield."

Don Jaime held out a telegram to him. "Please file that as you go out, Ken. The doctor has sent to El Paso for a trained nurse, and as soon as she arrives I'll go out to the ranch and recuperate. All I require is an expert to dress these punctures and keep an eye out for possible infection. As for those sheeps—I mean sheep—tell Antrim's foreman to restrict them to the country south of the Arroyo San Dieguito. The feed there isn't so attractive to my cattle anyhow, but sheep can make a living there. Adios, mi buen companero."

Although she had promised Crooked Bill Latham that she would start for Los Algodones immediately, such was her curiosity to meet the adorable Don Jaime Miguel Higuenes, Roberta Antrim awakened the following morning with a changed mind. During the night she had decided that the border town, in June, would not be to her liking. She hadn't the slightest idea of the size of her late uncle's estate, but she believed it to be inconsiderable. Regardless of its size, however, she asked herself what beneficent purposes could she serve by going down there now. The Higuenes man had volunteered to look after her interests, the bank had recommended him highly, so why not permit him to be as neighborly as he wished!

Crooked Bill was quite prepared for this change of mind. So he said nothing beyond a mild inquiry as to what reply she had sent Don Jaime Miguel Higuenes to his charming telegram.

"Oh, I told him I would be happy to have him look after my interests until I could find a man to relieve him, at which time he would be remunerated for his work. I also asked him to send me a detailed account of the manner in which Uncle Tom met his death and instructed him to have Uncle Tom buried in the local cemetery and send the bill to me."

"Hum-m!" Crooked Bill's grunt was very skeptical. "Did you ask him for any information regarding your Uncle Tom's estate?"

"No, Uncle Bill. I thought you'd look after those details for me."

"I will, honey, but I have a few details of my own that require looking after. I'm up to my eyebrows in Motors and if the market goes against me (and I don't like the looks of it) I'm liable to have to go down to Texas, take hold of your Uncle Tom's sheep business and try to eke out an existence for us. I suppose you'd give me a job as your manager, wouldn't you, Bobby?"

"I'm not. Neither am I lugubrious, my dear. It will be time enough for that when I invite my creditors in to gather up the pieces."

"You're a strange mixture of optimism and pessimism, Uncle Bill. Are you really deep in the market?"

"I'm in motors up to my eyebrows. I have a few other lines, but motors is the stock that won't let your Uncle Bill sleep well lately. You see, Bobby, when one plays on margin and sells short, he makes a dollar a share every time the price drops a point; if he buys short he loses a dollar a share every time the price mounts a point. And the brokers keep calling for more margain . . . Well, I bought five thousand shares at 110—"

"Well, the stock has gone up to a hundred and ninety—"

Roberta came to the old man and put her fair arms around his leathery neck. "I'm Uncle Tom's heir. At least he wrote me to that effect once when he was very ill—"

"The time he was shot by his foreman in a quarrel over participating profits, you mean."

"—so if you go bust, Uncle Bill, you can have Uncle Tom's sheep."

"A terrible heritage," Crooked Bill replied, and shuddered. "Well, we'll hope for the best, honey."

"Of course, you can sell now and pocket your loss, can you not?"

"A true sport never knows a regret, Bobby. He always protects his bets. I think I'll sell out my line of cotton and steel today and use my considerable profit to protect my other trades." Crooked Bill Latham hung his head and wiped his eyes carefully. "Seeing what a sport you are, Bobby, I find courage to tell you something. I've sold Hilcrest—that is, I've given my bankers a deed under an agreement to file it for record in case I fail to meet my obligations to the bank—and if that inside crowd keeps on shoving motors up and up—"

"Whatever happens we'll be brave about it, old dear," Roberta assured him tenderly. "There, there, Uncle Bill, buck up now."

"I tell you, Bobby, I'm so nervous about that stock I'm afraid to go into New York, for fear I'll find myself a babbling idiot when I step off the train. Anything can happen in this market, and I don't know what to do. I felt pretty badly when you and Glenn had your bust-up the other night," he went on. "I had hoped to see you settled for life. What happens to me doesn't matter. A man can lie down in the cactus, but a woman must be protected."

"You darling! But I don't want to be safe. I'm young; I want to see something of life; I want adventure and romance, and it isn't found in Glenn Hackett's set."

"Texas is the largest state in the Union—there's plenty of room for romance there. How about this Jaime Miguel Higuenes?"

"I'm afraid I might not care for him after all, Uncle Bill. I've made up my mind never to become interested in a Latin. They're so explosive and emotional and tyrannical; they kiss each other—the men. I mean—and weep at things an American would find humorous."

"However, you or your legal representative will have to go to Texas soon and do something about those sheep."

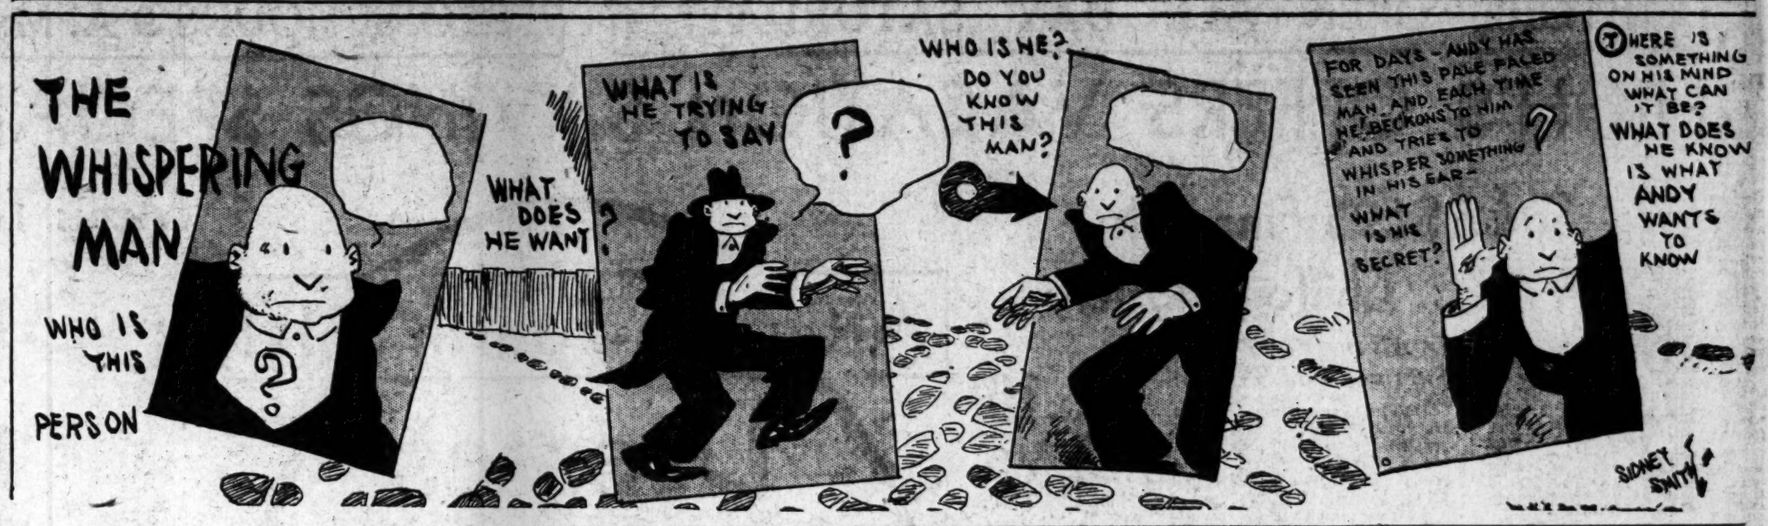

"But I do not know that I am heir to those sheep. Can't you wait until a will is unearthed or the absence of one definitely established? Glenn brought up that point yesterday. If there is no will I shall, of course, as Uncle Tom's next to kin, petition for letters of administration, but until I have a letter from Senor Higuenes it seems to me I can do nothing but mark time."

It was a week before the expected letter arrived from Jaime Miguel Higuenes. Having perused it, Roberta handed it to Crooked Bill.

ROME AND BRUNSWICK LEAD IN BIRTH RATE

Department of Commerce Figures Show Georgia Births Exceeded Deaths.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—In Georgia last year there were 12,392 more births than deaths, according to a summary of births, deaths and mortality figures for the United States released today by the department of commerce.

Deaths in the state last year totaled 35,337, while 57,729 babies were born. Deaths of babies under one year totaled 4,455. In 1928, 59,123 births and 36,011 deaths were recorded.

Atlanta, of course, led all Georgia cities in births and deaths; Savannah was second, Macon third and Augusta fourth.

Albany	312	274	80.1
Athens	343	328	90.4
Atlanta	5,087	4,191	93.8
Augusta	1,169	1,150	95.
Brunswick	360	261	105.6
Columbus	883	797	111.
LaGrange	479	290	96.
Macon	1,217	1,038	75.6
Rome	495	413	123.2
Savannah	1,629	1,748	94.5
Valdosta	293	247	44.4

xDeaths under one year per 1,000 births.

The births in 1929 were less than in 1928 in every city except Brunswick and Rome, and the deaths were also less in every city except Brunswick and Waycross.

In all states except Nevada, New Mexico and Utah there were 2,142,124 live births last year, a decrease of 78,063 or 3.6 per cent from 1928. The number of deaths in the same states was 1,356,882, which is almost identical with the number of deaths in the same area in 1928. The infant mortality rate was 1.5 per cent lower than in 1928, when it was 68.8.

WATERMELON PRICES REMAIN UNIMPROVED

VALDOSTA, Ga., July 4.—There were few cars of melons loaded Friday and sales on the track were just as scarce. It was reported that 28s or better would bring $70 to $80, but there were no sales to verify this statement. Loadings were being made in instances where farmers were growing in partnership with produce houses.

With the weather mostly cloudy Thursday, a heavy rain late in the afternoon and a very hot sun Friday, the opinion was advanced that the remainder of the crop would be as badly scalded as the melons were last week.

If the melons did burn Friday the shipments Saturday and early next week will be knocked down to the minimum again.

CUBAN'S PLEA DENIED IN ALIMONY CASE

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 4.—(AP)—Judge P. W. Meldrim, in superior court Thursday refused to modify a judgment holding William M. He is an American citizen and resident of Savannah. The case has been in litigation for about 18 months. The amount involved is $735.

DAISY GOINS FREED IN SWAIN KILLING

THOMASTON, Ga., July 4.—(AP)—Daisy Goins, 16, was discharged at a commitment hearing held Friday afternoon before Justice of the Peace James R. Davis, to fix responsibility for the death of Howell Swain, 37, of Molena, Ga.

She took the stand at the hearing and told the same story that was given yesterday by officers who investigated the case.

She said that Swain and others were waiting in her front yard when she returned from a peach orchard. They insisted that she go for a ride, she said, but she refused.

The girl declared that Swain cursed her and she ordered him away. "I told him I would shoot him with father's shotgun if he didn't go," she said. Entering the house she obtained the gun and opened fire. Swain fell dead.

Swain had been a resident of Molena only a few months, coming from Cummings, Ga. He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Ruby; one son, Albert; seven sisters and one brother, all of Cummings.

The body of Mr. Swain was carried to Fulton county for funeral and interment in Ebenezer cemetery.

FIGHTING ON TRAIN LEADS TO 7 ARRESTS

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 4.—(AP)—A small army of police, detectives and railroad special agents met an Atlantic Coast Line excursion train from Augusta just before noon Friday at the Union station. The officers removed from the train seven negroes, one of whom had been severely cut and had to be taken to a hospital.

At Yemassee, S. C., a serious cutting fray began in the train, police said, with Colie Best, 25, wielding a knife in dangerous fashion. Janie Coleman, Randall Rogers and Nancy Walton were wounded, the last named so badly that hospital treatment was required. Best, Coleman, Rogers, Norman Jones, Hattie Clark and Annie Johnson were placed under arrest. A tentative charge of assault with intent to murder has been lodged against Best.

Because of the cutting being near Yemassee, authorities of that section have been notified, and it is expected that prosecution of the case will be handled in South Carolina.

MELON CROP SITUATION DISCUSSED BY EXPERT

ATHENS, Ga., July 4.—The present slump in watermelon prices can be met best by all growers holding up loading until congestion is relieved, advises the division of agricultural economics and marketing at the Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Any radical change in marketing plans at this time for meeting the present situation would be unwise and the improvement in marketing comes about through forethought and experience, stated the marketing specialists at the agricultural college.

"The very heavy daily shipments coming suddenly upon the markets brought about the congestion last week. There seems to be no doubt now that the satisfactory results of the 1929 season stimulated plantings and the state as a whole has probably a larger acreage than last year, according to the marketing specialists.

"The maturity in the southern counties this season was delayed by cold weather in March, April and May. The hot weather of last week hurried development over a wide area. Competition from other fruits seems to be somewhat greater than last year, and, too, the purchasing power of the consumer is undoubtedly lower."

Rush for Inoculation Ensues as Typhoid Is Found in Athens

It is pointed out here that this community has undergone a changed attitude toward public health regulations in the last ten years. Adopting a modern milk ordinance about six years ago after a struggle against several who opposed its enactment, the health department has gradually aroused the citizens to pay more attention to the operation of dairies.

In addition, the constant fight against diphtheria and typhoid fever which resulted in the city and county being immune from the latter for two or three years, has caused citizens to rush to the health department or a private physician for inoculation against the germ once typhoid cases were reported. Instead of assuming that typhoid cases are necessary this time of the year, citizens are anxious to prevent its spreading.

Youth Breaks Neck Diving, But Lives

MACON, Ga., July 4.—(AP)—Tommy Spikes, 22, sustained a broken neck when he dived into a shallow canal near the Ocmulgee river here this afternoon. Several of his companions had jumped into the same canal without injury.

Spikes' head struck the river bed with such force, however, as to cause the fracture. He is still alive in a local hospital.

KLAN LEADER ASSAILS WORLD COURT PLAN

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 4.—(AP)—Dr. Samuel Green, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, was honored guest and principal speaker at a picnic and fish fry given today at Jencks bridge on the Ogeechee road by Samuel Green klan No. 393. The attendance was about 400, including a number from klan No. 41.

Dr. Green in his address asserted that the klan stands for all the rights and liberties promulgated by the forefathers in 1776 and stands opposed to relinquishing any of those rights to any other nation by affiliating with the world court. He charged that Congressman Oscar DePriest is going over the country trying to influence southern negroes to demand social and political equality, and said such men as DePriest are putting foolish notions into their heads and ruining them.

Dr. Green will leave Saturday for Bainbridge where klans of province No. 2 are to hold a meeting Sunday.

CANDIDATES ADDRESS FOURTH OF JULY GATHERINGS

Slaton Delivers Spirited Attack on Harris's Record

Urges Everybody Who Is Satisfied With Present Conditions To Vote for Present Senator.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., July 4.—(Special.)—Former Governor John M. Slaton, candidate for the United States senate against Senator William J. Harris, opened his speaking campaign here today, in a speech in which he severely criticized the record of his opponent.

Urging "everybody who is satisfied with present conditions" to vote for Harris, he declared that the state was in worse shape than it has been in many years and that through all its recent trials and tribulations "only one voice has been silent and that has been the voice of Senator Harris."

The speaker renewed the charges he has made in his recent published statements bearing on extravagance and the vote of Senator Harris against the confirmation of Judge Parker, of North Carolina, for the supreme court.

In summing up his address Governor Slaton declared that during Senator Harris' occupancy of office "he has voted billions that bent the backs of his people lower and lower. He never opened his mouth in behalf of economy, but boasts of his prodigal expenditures. He raised the cost of living of every man, woman and child in the nation; he drove the farmers from their homes and lessened the population of 100 counties in Georgia; he diminished by two the number of our congressmen; he stilled the whirring wheels of the factories, and placed rent signs on the homes."

Attacks Harris' Record.

The address in part was as follows:

"I come before you today as a candidate for the position in the United States senate now held by Hon. W. J. Harris. It is proper that you should know the reasons for my candidacy, and the differences which exist between my opponent and myself.

"The United States senate is a legislative body having greater power than any similar tribunal on earth. The senators from a state represent its sovereignty. They are ambassadors and are supposed to embody within themselves the aspirations, ideals and faiths of those who send them.

"If a senator from Georgia, under the influence of gifted speech, or forceful personality, or the superior intelligence of his colleagues from distant sections, abandons the fundamental beliefs of his people; if he becomes a worshipper of strange gods, and a devotee of foreign shrines, he is no longer a representative of those from whom he received his commission.

"The western states, with their miners of varied nationalities, the northern states with their cities and conglomerate population, and protected industries, simply have another senator, and Georgia one less.

"These thoughts suggest the reason of my appearance before you today.

"As I stated in my announcement, conditions in Georgia and throughout a large part of the country have never been worse. In this state countless farms are being sold for taxes and abandoned. In a hundred counties the population is less than 10 years ago. We are in danger of losing a congressman. A splendid rural population is diminishing because it cannot make a living on a farm. These country people won our liberties from the crown. They have convictions and a trust in the everlasting fundamentals. They think for themselves, and the golden calf of modern materialism has no temptation for them as against the Commandments on the tablets of stone. But they are fast disappearing.

"Our cities have their rent signs that show a declining prosperity and our mills are running on part time, with bread lines beginning to form. Our railroad shops do not run a full week, with consequent suffering to the poor and dependent.

Blames Extravagance.

"What is the reason for all this? Is there not capacity to find the explanation, and the courage to remedy it? The people of Georgia are not like the Hindu who has infinite ability to suffer but no strength to resist and correct.

"The taxes paid by this nation are 13 billion dollars a year, and are increasing 500 millions a year. The farmers pay directly 900 million dollars taxes annually. One day's labor in the week goes to the payment of governmental burdens.

"On April 15, 1930, the commissioner of revenues of North Carolina declared 'that extravagance in public expenditure must be arrested to prevent exhaustion of productive wealth.' Says he, 'We are learning that there is a limitation to the proportion of the total earnings of our people that will be given up for taxes under any scheme "of plucking the goose" that ingenuity may be able to set up. In my state the total tax burden has in ten years increased from $23,500,000 to $99,000,000.'

"At last the consumer pays it all whether at the window of the tax collector, at the shoe store or beef market, the dry goods counter, or the hardware store, whence come the hoes and the plows.

"Every dollar that is appropriated must be raised by a levy. The protected industries laugh gleefully as the millions and billions are given out in merry exchange by the appropriations committees and a complacent senate. It is all grist for their mill.

"The tariff must be raised, and there has just been placed the heaviest burden upon the American public that ever emanated from congress. None suffers more heavily than Georgia, to which a few trifling, meaningless sops were thrown, and in return for which she almost gives her birthright. Eleven hundred economists thundered against it; bankers, business men and farmers protested but to no avail.

Harris Silent.

"Only one voice was silent, and that was the voice of Senator Harris. As the twelve hundred and one items passed under consideration, when Senator George and his fellow senators were thundering denunciations on the robbery, Senator Harris did not utter a sound of any moment, and except a vote that a clerk might have cast, you search in vain the Congressional Record for any evidence that he was present. Has this been the history of Georgia in the past? Have her ambassadors been so dumb, has their courage been so weak or their speech so faltering that they did not rise up and resent an injustice to her people? History does not so record it.

"Senator Harris boasts that he was on the committee that made the appropriations; in fact, he has been on it during the ten years of constantly increasing depression. It is whispered by his friends that by buddying with the other senators on that committee and voting for their measures, he secured something for us. Evidently he was trimmed before he traded.

"During the World War the English government supplied stew made from the rabbits of Australia until they were nearly exhausted, and when the stew became poor a soldier asked the sergeant what was the matter, and he said that he was now mixing horse meat and rabbit meat on the basis of 50-50, that is one horse to one rabbit. This is the kind of trading Senator Harris has done.

"We find appropriations of $450,000,000 for Boulder Dam, $550,000,000 for the Mississippi river, $118,000,000 for palatial structures for politicians at Washington whose taste must not be offended by the modest structures to which they are accustomed at home. They become, that is, some of them do, habituated to the regal expenditures of an Indian maharajah, and forget the hunger and suffering that must pay for this splendor.

"We find last week a bill passed by the senate that contemplates the expenditure of $150,000,000 under guise of a plan to relieve unemployment. We know the farm can derive no benefit from it, and we know further it will go to New York, Detroit and Chicago, with their dependent alien populations pouring in from Europe and Asia.

"Senator Harris boasts of the billions of appropriations for which he has voted, increasing by leaps and bounds.

"Never once does he tell of an appropriation he voted against, never once does he boast of having lessened the burdens which would diminish the oppression of his people. Such a vote would be a badge of honor. If he ever scaled an appropriation, if he ever fought it on the floor of the senate, certainly he has never told the people about it, and such an action on his part he would seem to regard as a reproach instead of a service. He isn't proud of it or he would have mentioned it in some of his self-praising letters he has sent to his constituents.

"Just this week the rivers and harbors bill is up for passage, appropriating $137,000,000. Many states of the 48 states are inland states, having no harbors. Simply divide the amount and see what Georgia is entitled to and see what she got! Consider how dearly she paid for it!

"Her harbors and rivers are the most splendid of the nation. Her commerce increases the wealth of the country. They plead their own cause, and is it just to say that she would receive nothing but for Senator Harris? Are not the congressmen and the other senator from Georgia entitled to equal credit? If one of them appeared before the senate committee and made a statement of the merits of the claim of Georgia I daresay Georgia would receive as much without paying the heavy penalty of an unfair and burdensome trade. Georgia does not wish a pork barrel, but only fair recognition, and this she has never gotten in proportion to other sections.

"And the little crumb to the farmers! How dearly they pay for it! It is distributed to several states all of whose representatives in congress aid in the passage of the bill. When a bill for their relief is up for consideration, introduced and passed by representatives in the house, Senator Harris claims credit for it, and finally the truth comes out that Senator Harris did nothing but say: 'Mr. President, I can add nothing to what these gentlemen have said.' And even that bill carrying $7,000,000 in the house of representatives, is cut down to $6,000,000 by the senate appropriations committee, and the chairman, Senator McNary, says Senator Harris consented.

"This opens the door for us to see the boasted influence of Senator Harris.

"And then the senator to exploit himself writes or telegraphs the farmers to get their money, appropriated for their relief, and the poor farmer finds the bill has not passed, and when it does pass the amount is so small it affords no aid.

"Congressman Crisp says that on account of the robber tariff bill just passed 36 nations are threatening to cease trading with us, and our products will rot on our hands.

"Bear in mind that the increased cost of living, the royal expenditures, the robber tariff, the deserted farms and idle factories all trace their cause to this appropriations committee, of which Senator Harris boasts a membership.

"And he loudly asserts that he appropriates billions of dollars, but never whispers that he sounds a note of economy.

"Is it possible that a sensible Georgia people will approve such a record, and will kiss the hand that smites?

"My declaration is: 'Let everybody who is satisfied with present conditions vote for Senator Harris!'

The Parker Case.

"Thirty days ago the president nominated for a place on the supreme court of the United States a North Carolinian, Judge Parker, a member of the fourth circuit of the United States court of appeals. He was endorsed by the bar associations of Virginia, North and South Carolina, by the democratic governor of his state, by the federal and state judges, including 12 circuit and district judges, by five presidents and ex-presidents of the American Bar Association, by the two democratic senators of North Carolina and by the attorney general of the United States.

"Senator Harris had voted for his confirmation as judge of the United States court of appeals.

"Two charges were made against him:

"First, he, with his two associate judges, had decided on appeal a labor injunction case.

"Second, when running for governor 10 years ago he had declared that negroes should not participate in politics.

"The first charge amounted to nothing, because he was constrained by the decisions of the supreme court, which he was bound to follow, to render the opinion complained of. In fact, the supreme court refused to consider a rehearing of the very decision when it was presented to the supreme court for review, and yet Senator Harris said he went beyond precedent.

"But the second ground of attack produced his defeat.

"There are 300,000 negroes in New York, a similar number in Illinois and Michigan, and large numbers in New Jersey and other northern states where they constitute the balance of power.

"The National Society for the Advancement of Colored People took up the fight. It is dominated by a communist, Mrs. Florence Kelley, formerly Wischnetetcy, Oscar Garrison Villard, a Rev. Holmes, all white, and W. E. Dubois, a negro, and others of the same color.

"Mrs. Kelley translated the works of the German communist Engels into English.

"Villard is the grandson of the abolitionist and notorious south hater during the Civil War, and himself in favor of negro social and political equality.

"Holmes says 'we need no Bible and no Christ.' Dubois, the negro editor of the Crisis, admits he is a bolshevist, and is the worst enemy of the south in the United States.

"This organization had mass meetings all over the north to protect against a man who had dared declare in favor of white supremacy.

"The negro congressman, DePriest, from Chicago, where negroes and whites intermarry, stayed in the senate chamber urging the defeat of Parker.

"Villard declared in his paper, The Nation, that the negro organization controlled the votes of 17 senators.

"Parker was born a poor boy, worked his way through school, had always been a friend to the laboring man, had advocated philanthropic legislation, was descended from the best white stock, but he did not believe the negro the equal of the white.

Defeated by One Vote.

"And he was defeated by one vote. The vote of Senator Harris beat him.

"The senator endeavored to explain it by saying he was not an outstanding lawyer. Remarkable statement after the indorsements he had received from the highest authority in the United States!

"But I smoked him out by calling attention to the fact the senator had voted for his confirmation to the court of appeals. If he was fit for one he was fit for the other.

"Then the senator changed his story and said he did not like Judge Parker's 'leanings' in the labor decision, which he was obliged to render in obedience to superior authority.

"The senator has been voting with western senators, situated in different surroundings from a Georgia representative. They lived in states dominated by miners of foreign nationality to whom no explanation of authority or precedent could be made. And then Senator Harris may have thought he would catch the labor vote, forgetting that in Georgia the laboring man is a white man before anything else. He may have been influenced by the delight he would experience in turning down a republican president.

"But whatever his motives he ceased to be a senator from Georgia. He was present and saw the negro congressman De Priest urge on the floor of the senate the defeat of Parker.

"That one vote deprived the south of another representative on the supreme court of the United States during our generation. Justice McReynolds, of Tennessee, is eligible for retirement in 1932, and no republican president would wish to appoint a southern man and start a dissension in his own party, when every genuine man in the south thinks just as Judge Parker does. The president would not only suffer loss in his own party, from the negro votes, but would be faced by the defeat of his nominee by a southern senator.

"The supreme court passes on the fourteenth and fifteenth amendment to the constitution, dealing with the rights of negroes. The vote of one judge may enter negroes into the railroad coaches with the white people, or may nullify our election laws, or put negroes on our juries and grand juries.

"The negro papers of the north gleefully announced the victory was theirs, covering their front pages with glaring announcements of the defeat of Judge Parker, and they assert that henceforth they will insist on all their rights.

"Senator Harris, ignorant of what was going on, busy with sending out self-praising articles, or inquiring as to the health of somebody's mule, delivered a blow to white supremacy that has not been equalled since the days of reconstruction.

"To bring the matter home to the people of Georgia, Congressman De Priest, of Chicago, who has been stumping the state of West Virginia against the senators of that state for voting in favor of Parker, ought to campaign Georgia in behalf of Harris.

"But my friends, I have a heavier indictment yet to bring against Senator Harris. His diligent press bureau tells of little things he does, and each week predicts something he will do, but this campaign will enable you to take his measure. The other day, another senator finding himself in distress had printed in the Congressional Record 166 achievements of his. Senator Harris sinks into insignificance beside him.

"But fellow citizens I make a charge he will not deny.

"In 1924 this same Mrs. Wischnetetcy, afterwards Florence Kelley, the communist, lobbied through the congress a proposed amendment to the constitution of the United States, to be known as the twentieth amendment. It required a vote of two-thirds of the senate, and two-thirds of the house, and ratification by three-fourths of the states.

"This amendment proposed to give congress power to regulate the labor of children up to the age of 18 years. If adopted it meant that a bureau at Washington would be substituted for every father and mother in the nation.

"Georgia may not have the material wealth of some of the states, but the glory of her homes is unsurpassed on the face of the earth. In that atmosphere are brought up the children upon whose character and wisdom depends the perpetuity of this republic. The control of fathers and mothers, however humble, achieves more in the virtue of the girls and honesty of the boys than all the codes that were ever written, or all the doctrinaries that ever were born.

"The amendment would have deprived the mothers of the right of directing their daughters in the tasks of housekeeping, or the father of the right to teach his sons the habits of industry, unless in conformity with the rules of a bureau at Washington.

"Georgia was one of the first states to which the amendment was submitted for ratification, and be it said that an outraged legislature rejected it by an almost unanimous vote, and 34 out of 38 states that acted on it rejected it.

"Senator Harris never voted against it, nor paired against it, nor had announcement made as to what were his views upon it. It was unprecedented conduct of a senator on a matter of such importance. He said he was sick—maybe a cold or cold feet. I would have been brought into the senate on a litter to have protested against this assault on Georgia homes. Senator George was there to stand by us, but Senator Harris was counted among the missing. He could answer letters promptly at government expense, but he could not defend the firesides of the nation.

The World Court.

"There is a League of Nations which created a World Court, to which was entrusted the decision of questions arising between countries. This League of Nations determines the proceedings of this court, and by its articles declares that armed forces shall require obedience to its decrees.

"All the authorities agree that the World Court is a part of the League of Nations. Elihu Root, its creator, declares it as an essential part. Sir Eric Drummond says it is the gate of entrance to the league.

"This court has fourteen judges, of which the United States would have one. Thirteen to one is the proportion—thirteen judges against us on any question in which the United States is interested.

"That court may be called upon to decide what shall be our immigration laws, the force of the Monroe Doctrine, whether Europe shall pay the debts due us, whether we shall exclude Japanese from our schools. Just the other day the British bankers insisted that Great Britain be allowed a credit of $400,000,000 on repudiated bonds largely issued by the southern states during the Reconstruction period, when negroes constituted our legislatures under the protection of federal soldiers.

"Within the month, Briand, foreign minister of France, issued an invitation to the nations of Europe to form the United States of Europe in order to protect their peculiar group of interests—all being antagonistic to the United States.

"To enter the League of Nations means the abandonment of our independence and the submission of our private affairs to the superior vote of hostile countries.

"To enter the World Court means the gift to thirteen men of the power to force on us the sacrifice of our most precious rights and a surrender of our sovereign power to declare war only when we deem it necessary in defense of national honor.

"These thirteen judges are of different color, different religions, and different ideals from ours. Judge Parker would probably refuse to sit on such a court.

"Senator Harris favored entry into the League of Nations and into the World Court with reservations.

"Our armies and navies, our citizens would have been subject to the command of foreign potentates, and he voted for this. I oppose it, and this is an issue between us.

"He speaks of entering the World Court with reservations, that is, if a matter is considered in which we are interested we can withdraw. Does not that make the United States a sorry spectacle—judging others and unwilling to be judged—deciding the rights of others and refusing to have its rights decided? You know it would be impossible and indecent. It is but the gradual step that leads to the loss of our independence. Just as the Norwegian member of the World Court said: 'The entrance of the United States in the World Court means its ultimate entrance into the League of Nations.' Professor Shotwell, of Columbia college, says 'They may not know it, but the United States will soon be a partner in the league.'

"General Toombs said, when the returning board of seven republicans and six democrats seated Hayes, the republican, instead of Tilden, the democrat: 'The democrats did not know seven was more than six.'

"Senator Harris betrays either woeful ignorance or seeks to mislead the people by saying 'This is a dead issue.' There is not a word of truth in the statement.

"President Hoover two months ago threatened to hold congress in session until the World Court proposition had been acted upon, and now he formally announces he will force action at the December session of congress.

"And within the last 30 days Mrs. McCormick defeated Senator Deneen, of Illinois, by 200,000 majority, and she says the sole issue was the World Court, and she opposed it.

"Ah, fellow citizens, Harris says he tried to exclude a few Mexican Indians from the United States, but through the World Court he is trying to take the Ark of the Covenant of the United States over to Europe, and submit ourselves and posterity to foreign monarchs and alien governments.

He will take over 120,000,000 American people and place them at the tender mercies of distant intriguing diplomats, and subject them to the greed, hatred and prejudice of foreigners.

He would require us to guarantee with our blood and money the boundary lines and territorial integrity of foreign nations. I am willing to spend our utmost resources to protect our own boundaries, but not those of Europe and Asia.

Blows Within Are Fatal.

"Fellow citizens, I was born in Georgia—in it I expect to be laid away with the ashes of my ancestors.

"I have seen her in the travail of sorrow, but her courage and the ability of her statesmen have rescued her, and she became the recognized queen of the south—its Empire State.

"She could fight and prevail over her enemies from without—she could survive the assaults of carpet-baggers and scalawags. But the blows of those within are fatal. When Caesar was approached by the assassins he withstood them until he saw the dagger of his best friend, and as it sank in his breast, he resisted no longer, but exclaimed with dying gasp, "and you too, Brutus."

"During Senator Harris' occupancy of office he voted billions that bent the backs of his people lower and lower. He never opened his mouth in behalf of economy, but boasts of his prodigal expenditures. He raised the cost of living of every man, woman and child in the Nation; he drove the farmers from their homes and lessened the population of 100 counties in Georgia; he diminished by two the number of our congressmen; he stilled the whirring wheels of the factories, sent eager workmen into a breadline, placed rent signs on the stores.

"This senator from Georgia by his vote rendered successful the attacks of northern negroes against a man whose only offense was his advocacy of white supremacy, and he did it in the selfish desire to obtain the labor vote of Georgia. He rendered no aid when parental authority was attacked, and centralization in its most horrid form sought the destruction of the American home.

"He advocates the surrender of American sovereignity and independence to a foreign court of hostile sentiment; he urges that our boys he subject to foreign instruments to police Europe and fight the battles of contending dynasties; he supports the opening of our treasury to the hungry fingers of pauper Europe, and then he says to you: "These things I have done. Return me for six years longer that I may complete the destruction.'

"He has received from the public treasury $200,000 in salaries, and wishes the increase of six years more.

"If you approve his conduct, if you are satisfied with things as they are, vote for him, but I pray that God, with his omnipotent hand, will avert the disaster you are inviting upon yourself.

"Let me beg you to at least get a man to represent the sovereignty of your state who will try to save the precious heritage your father left you and will raise his protest against the wrongs that ignorance and prejudice hurl against you.

"I leave it with you. In whose hands will you leave the destiny of your children and your country. Harris' or mine?"

DEBATE CHALLENGE ISSUED BY RUSSELL

FITZGERALD, Ga., July 4.—(Special.)—Defying those candidates who are hinting that there is something mysterous about my candidacy" to meet him in joint debate and let the people decide, Richard B. Russell, Jr., candidate for governor, today addressed a large number of voters present at the annual Fourth of July celebration here.

Mr. Russell especially stressed the need of economy in state governmental affairs and favored the reducing of the number of departments now in existence.

His address, in part, was as follows:

"Conditions in Georgia have reached a point where it is well for every citizen to take stock of his government to determine what Georgia needs. In the present gubernatorial campaign you will have promises in plentitude from some of the candidates. You will have Utopian platforms that promise reduction in all taxes and the increase of all appropriations.

"I will not attempt to mislead the voters by advocating or promising things that it is impossible to fulfill within the next two years. The state now has a floating debt of millions of dollars, most of it past due to the most important agencies of government, such as the sanitarium for the insane, the public schools and educational institutions. We must get the state out of debt and put these institutions on a cash basis, and regardless of any promises that may be made by any candidate we cannot in the next two years venture far in new and expensive activities of government and at the same time provide for these essentials.

"The next two years must see a constructive administration of the state's business, and the elimination of all waste and extravagance of tax money. There is only one way to reduce the cost of government and that is by doing away with the need for appropriations. The only way to do away with the need for appropriations is to stop some outlet of expense, and this means the abolition or consolidation of some departments now supported by tax funds. At present the state's business is handled by 80 different boards, departments and institutions. The present system is inefficient and costs too much money, and there are no reasons except political reasons why the taxpayers of this state should be compelled to support many useless political offices or to provide a political machine at public expense to further the campaign of some old factional leader for office.

"The state of Virginia, under the leadership of Harry Byrd, a young and active man, recently reduced her 100 boards to less than a dozen. The state of Tennessee reorganized her government by reducing her boards from 49 to 8. The taxpayers of Georgia are entitled to the savings that will come with a complete reorganization of the state government, and to have a state government that is simple enough to be understood by all of our citizens.

"We have learned by experience that we can expect no relief from the present condition so long as we look to the leaders of the old factions for state leadership. The election of one means that the other immediately organizes to block any move that may be made by the other to change existing conditions. The people of this state have been arrayed against each other along factional lines for years. The only solution is to beat both factions and their satellites.

"I offer my record to show that I have always fought to abolish useless political jobs.

"A state of affairs that almost placed the highway department in bankruptcy, and which sees the sanitarium for the insane now suffering for funds, the school teachers waiting for that which the state has promised them, and the old Confederate soldiers unable to collect their pensions, creates a condition that demands the attention of every thinking Georgian, and regardless of how diligently and industriously some of the present candidates have served the old factions, or how zealously they have defended political machines and rings, the best interests of the entire people require that we get away from factional leadership.

School Books.

"We have a law in Georgia to force parents to send their children to school, but which permits the school book trust to charge them excessive and exorbitant prices for the books they are compelled to buy, and also permits changes in the books used so often that parents with more than one child are compelled to buy new books each year for grades for which they have already purchased books. The experience of other governments, and our experience in Georgia with law books, shows that the price of school books can be reduced to one-third their present cost by the state having the school books printed by contract and distribute them to the people at cost.

"It is interesting to note that neither of the old factional leaders have had a word to say on this question. As a member of the state legislature Mr. Rivers voted against a bill providing for the state to furnish school books at cost. He, therefore, advocates free school books. Do not be misled by a promise of free school books. With the state now millions of dollars behind in payments to the school teachers, the old soldiers and the state sanitarium, no governor can provide free school books during the next two years.

"I will gladly debate this issue with any candidate in this race who remains mute regarding or who attempts to defend the present system of school books in Georgia, that he may obtain the benefit of the financial support of the school book trusts or the political aid of their highly paid attorneys in the present campaign.

"The question of support of education and of equalized educational opportunities is of the utmost importance to the people of Georgia today. I advocate, as I have always, adequate provision for our common schools and educational institutions.

Reduced Appropriations.

"In my administration there will be no excessive appropriations, as I will veto any bill carrying more money than will be available in the state treasury. However, to prevent the injustice in the future that we see today, I favor a change in our fundamental law that will place every employe of the state, from the governor down to the lowest salaried school teacher in the poorest country county in Georgia, on the same footing when appropriations exceed the revenue. In all of the distress which has attended our present financial discord, not one word of complaint has been heard from any employe in the capitol that he has not received his salary promptly, and I submit that it is unfair to pay the employes in the capitol promptly and then dole out what is left to the school teachers.

"The work of the highway department of Georgia is largely in the public eye, and if the great damage wrought by Mr. Holder's political administration can be speedily cured, this important department will have at its demand sufficient funds to complete the state aid system and build a permanent paved road in every county in Georgia, as the result of legislation passed at the last session, and which I was active in promoting. I hope that the question of bonds is settled, but one of the old factional candidates, Mr. Carswell, has been most zealous in advocating state bond issues of millions of dollars, both in the campaign of 1926 when he was defeated for governor on this issue and during the legislative session of 1929 when a great deal of the time of that body was consumed by efforts to force the legislature to vote bonds. In fairness to the people of Georgia Mr. Carswell should give them his latest opinion on the matter, as he has been identified with both bond opponents and bond advocates in the past, as he has sought the popular side.

"In all good faith the state must repay the counties that have advanced money to the highway board for expenditure on state roads, for despite the fact that in an effort to secure support in his campaign, Mr. Holder's lieutenants claim that he personally presented the few roads he built to the counties. Very few roads were built during Mr. Holder's administration except with county funds, and most of those at a fearful cost.

"Sinister" Charges.

"My opponents seem to lay considerable stress on the fact that my father happens to hold a position on the supreme court and allege that this disqualifies me to serve as governor. In fact, they seek to make it appear that there is something sinister in any man seeking public office if his father has been honored by the people.

"Mr. Carswell in one of his campaigns for governor in 1926 assailed Mr. Holder for holding on to the chairmanship of the highway board and using it as a political machine to help elect him, yet in this campaign we see that Mr. Carswell clings to the office of secretary of state.

"Mr. Perry is also holding on to a state job which can be effectively used as a club to force big business to support him in this campaign and his term yet has four and a half years to run at a salary of $5,000 per year.

"Mr. Holder forever forfeited the right to whisper about anybody holding office when he attempted to homestead on the chairmanship of the highway board after his term of office had expired and, with the aid of Mr. Rivers, who is a by-product of the Holder school, defied all efforts of the people of the state and of the governor to make him loose his clutches on the chairmanship of the highway board before he bankrupted the department.

"If I am qualified to be governor, I see no reason why my father should not administer the oath of office to me as well as to any other man and I will never believe that the people of this state will heed an effort to proscribe a man from serving his people in public office on the flimsy grounds that his father had held office. To do so would be to hold that a man who accomplished anything in life had forever condemned his children to oblivion.

"I am sure that this pitiful effort to array against me in this campaign any political enemies my father may have made will receive the condemnation it deserves. This is another smoke screen which is raised in an attempt to obscure the records of some of the other candidates and the issues I am advocating in this campaign. To those candidates who are hinting that there is something mysterious or unreal about my candidacy I propose that if there is any doubt in their minds as to whose views I am presenting in this campaign, I will gladly meet them all in joint meeting before the pepple and let the voters decide between us."

muddled, with false starts, obstructed track and a general lack of thrills as promised. As one loud-voiced spectator put it, you could get more excitement at Five Points. This all tended to work on the crowd's temper, and it got plenty sore. Prices of everything were elastic, too, the popular soft drink ranging from five to ten cents; peanuts were either a dime or a nickel a bag, depending on the vender; ice cream was sold to small boys acting for mother for 15 cents a brick, and to lantern-jawed business men the price was "ten cents, guv-nor." Race programs that were never fulfilled sold for 10, 15 and 25 cents.

But everywhere it was not so disappointing. Chicken dinners on the shadowy lawns of parks, melon cuttings out in the sylvan dells near town and a spirit of hilarity born of the day itself kept the glorious Fourth safe and sane. Nearly everybody went somewhere; no kicks could be laid at the door of the Weather Man, and in the cool of the evening people were flocking back homeward, tired but just about satisfied.

E. S. McEwen, of 390 Cameron street, and Marion Putnam, of Smyrna, were locked up on charges of speeding and reckless driving and possession of liquor, respectively, after they had been chased through several downtown blocks by detectives. They were said to have thrown several bottles of liquor out of their car.

Accident Victims Treated.

Other persons treated in the Grady emergency clinic on the Fourth included:

R. L. Dees, Jr., 6, 811 Kirkwood avenue, for lacerations about the head and hands.

Mrs. S. T. Duncan, of 812 Portland terrace, for cuts about the body.

J. H. Stephens, 21, of 1633 McDonough road, cuts about the face.

Mrs. W. H. Barber, 49, of 592 Cameron street, for injuries about the chest.

Mrs. N. R. Broyles, wife of Judge Nash R. Broyles, chief judge of the court of appeals, suffered a broken left shoulder Friday afternoon in a fall at her home, 156 Seventh street, N. E. She was taken to a local hospital, where she was reported to be resting well late Friday night.

Late Friday night two others were given treatment at Grady hospital for burned hands and fingers, caused by firecrackers exploding prematurely. They were Charles Newton, 10, of 632 Kent street, and Theo Hanjarras, 16, of a Crew street address.

EXTRAVAGANCE CHARGE IS MADE BY BROWN

Denies Alliance With Any Gubernatorial Aspirant.

BAXLEY, Ga., July 4.—(Special.) Honorable J. J. Brown, former commissioner of agriculture, in an address here today launched his candidacy for that office in opposition to Commissioner Eugene Talmadge.

In his opening speech, delivered near the bank of a river midway between Baxley and Alma, Mr. Brown spoke vigorously of what he termed the need of a drastic change in the administration of the department of agriculture.

"The best way to describe the situation during the three years the present commissioner has served is to refer you to the plight of the farmers of this state," Mr. Brown said. "For three years during this administration the farmers of this state have suffered as they have never suffered before. Farming conditions are chaotic, the farmers are broke and it does not look like they have many friends left in the public life of this state and this country."

He reviewed his own record as commissioner, told of his early establishment of the present bureau of markets, the establishment of the Peanut Association, the Co-operative Cotton Marketing Association, the Cane Growers' Association, co-operative poultry car sales in conjunction with the state college of agriculture and establishment of the crop reporting service.

Referring to the race four years ago between him and Commissioner Talmadge, Brown said at that time Talmadge charged "extravagance" in the department of agriculture. Since then the recent audit of the department shows that the Talmadge administration has spent more money and has more employees than the Brown administration ever had.

"The present administration of the department of agriculture is costing the people far more than our administration cost and is rendering less service," he said.

No Alliances.

Mr. Brown said he wanted to emphasize his position clearly as to the five candidates in the race for governor. He said he is the friend of each and every one and is in no way supporting or allied with any one candidate, at the expense of the other.

"In this connection I know you will indulge me for rehearsing a little more history relative to the campaign four years ago. The public will recall that we had four candidates for governor in 1926. I was accused of being lined up with one of these candidates, which proved to be false in the end, but during the heat of the campaign it was hurled from every stump that a mighty combination had been formed and all the candidates except this one, who was accused of being in alliance with the department of agriculture, naturally fought the department. These candidates did not bring any personal offensive charges against the commissioner but kept before the people the danger of so powerful a department being in alliance with another great department, and in this aggressive, heated campaign of '26 all issues between my opponents and myself were relegated to the background and nothing but danger of a mighty combine of political influence that threatened to overthrow the state, was allowed to get to the people in that campaign.

"Today we have five candidates for governor and two candidates for commissioner of agriculture. Each and every one of the five candidates running for governor so far as I know are my personal friends. Making my own race for commissioner as I am, and having no political alliance whatever with any one, I feel confident that no fair minded man or woman in this state will attempt to accuse me with lining up with any candidate, all of whom are my friends, and so far as I know all of whom are friends to the department of agriculture and the Georgia farmer.

Co-operated With College.

"When I was first elected commissioner of agriculture, I inherited a division between the department of agriculture and the Georgia State College of Agriculture. There had been many differences of opinion and much bickering between the two important departments for many years previous to my election as commissioner. I began immediately to adjust some of these differences and I met the full and hearty co-operation on the part of the president of the State College of Agriculture, as well as his lieutenants, in an effort to bring about a perfect reconciliation of all differences and a full co-ordination and co-operative working plan between the two important departments.

"I am glad to say that if I never serve the people of my state again in any capacity, if I never do anything else for agriculture in a public way, I shall always point with pride to the fact that during my administration as commissioner of agriculture a full and complete co-operation and co-ordination between the department of agriculture and the State College of Agriculture was perfected, and I hope I may be pardoned when I say, that the great field forces of the extension department, together with that of the other departments of the State College of Agriculture rendered to this state a service of great value, and I hope that the commissioner of agriculture, whoever he may be in the future, will strive to the end that yet greater service may be rendered the whole people of our great commonwealth."

'Never Worry' Secret Of Age, Floridian Says

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 4.—(AP)—"Never Worry" is the advice of Major Edward James Monroe, of Jacksonville, who today celebrates what he says is his 115th birthday.

"I never worry," Major Monroe said. "Come day, go day, it's all the same to me. Worry will kill you quicker than anything else. It is the most dangerous thing in the world."

Major Monroe believes in watching his diet, too. Fish, fruit and fresh vegetables make up his menu with long walks each day for exercise. Until comparatively recently he took a daily swim in the St. Johns river here, but his physicians denied him that privilege sometime ago.

roads, and said he would favor distribution of automobile license tags by county officials.

Mr. Carswell, who is secretary of state, bitterly attacked Mr. Holder's record as highway commissioner, and said that he would strive from the first for a highway department free from politics. He also advocated tax reform, including a "fair and just income tax in lieu of an ad valorem tax," and said he would continue to approve appropriations sufficient "to carry on" the work of the various departments already started. Statements that he was backed by "the book trusts," Mr. Carswell said, were "absolutely untrue and without the slightest foundation."

Other candidates for governor, Richard B. Russell, Jr., of Winder, and Ed Rivers, of Lakeland, both spoke at Fitzgerald, while James A. Perry, chairman of the public service commission, spoke at Madison.

Those three have been speaking for several weeks, although Mr. Perry added a new note with the statement: "It is common knowledge that with the convening of our law-making bodies, from session to session, business throughout the nation trembles with fear until adjournment is had."

This condition must be remedied, he said, by the selection of "a new type of leaders, who must blaze anew a path sufficiently inviting to bring back into governmental service the real statesmanship of our citizenry abroad in the land."

Mr. Russell, who is the son of Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, of the state supreme court, expressed resentment to the fact certain candidates have been "hinting" that there was something "mysterious" about his campaign.

"I will gladly meet them all in joint meeting before the people and let the voters decide between us," he said.

Mr. Rivers, who, outlining the same policies upon which he sought the governorship two years ago, said the greatest need of the state is efficiency and economy.

RECORDER PLANS TO REJAIL PRISONERS

many in the stockade who ought not to be turned loose upon society.

"I do not agree with Mr. Couch in his sentiments in the matter," Judge Callaway said. "I suppose he acted upon a conscientious motive, but I do not feel that he did exactly the right thing. It is as though law enforcement had been thrown down. The situation will probably work out all right, however, as the court will doubtless have to deal with a number of the prisoners again in the near future and will put them away again."

Judge Callaway said he did not see how the superintendent of the stockade could turn loose prisoners serving less than 30 days and faced by less than a $50 fine, on an executive order. He said he will ask City Attorney Mayson for a ruling, and the will decide his course as to whether he will proceed to order rearrest of those prisoners who were not due for clemency.

"It was a great shock and surprise to me to hear of the action of the mayor pro tem," Judge Callaway said. "It is liable to work harm on the community. I certainly do not think that Mayor Ragsdale would have done a thing like that. There is no charity in it. On the bench, we try to extend all the mercy possible when trying cases. It is the duty of the police court bench to try to protect society by enforcing the law, and I feel that the law has been thrown down in this instance."

"If Mr. Couch had called upon me for assistance, I would have been glad to check the worthy cases with him in order to recommend clemency for some of the prisoners as we do at Christmas time," Judge Callaway said.

When Couch granted general amnesty Thursday to Atlanta's prisoners, as acting mayor in Mayor Ragsdale's absence from the city, he created just such a storm as followed an action by another acting mayor a year ago.

Pennington vetoed the bill, passed on a Thursday, the following Saturday morning, a few hours before Ragsdale returned to Atlanta.

The mayor expressed his surprise at the veto and said that he would have approved the bill had he been in Atlanta. He also stated that had he had any intimation that Pennington would veto the measure, he would have instructed the acting mayor not to act on the bill during his absence.

Mayor Ragsdale, however, declined to comment on why he had left the city when a measure of such importance was awaiting his action without leaving instructions.

Wool Markets Decline During Past Week

BOSTON, July 4.—(AP)—The Commercial Bulletin of Boston will say tomorrow:

"Business in the seaboard wool markets has slumped noticeably in the last week. Manufacturers are showing little interest in wool after recent heavy purchases and are evidently waiting for better demand for goods. The holiday and inventories also contribute to the dullness and there is a disposition to await the London sales both here and abroad. Prices generally are maintained without change this week:

"In the west buying has also slowed up, although the growers show no disposition to lower prices for the wools which are still unsold.

"Foreign markets have shown an easier tendency and Bradford predicts 5 to 7 1-2 per cent decline at London generally, for the sales commencing Tuesday.

"The rail and water shipments of wool from Boston from January 1, 1930, to July 2, 1930, inclusive, were 67,611,500 pounds against 88,889,000 pounds for the same period last year. The receipts from January 1, 1930, to July 2, 1930, inclusive, were 156,457,600 pounds, against 152,589,185 pounds for the same period last year."

Ford Builds 995,226 Cars in First 6 Months

DETROIT, July 4.—(AP)—World production of Ford cars and trucks during the first six months of the year totaled 995,226, the Ford Motor Company announced today. Production in June was 174,528 units.

POLITICS HOLD SPOTLIGHT AT MANY STATE MEETINGS

Holder Makes Defense Of Highway Board Record

Says Work Done Under His Direction Largely Responsible for Present Prospects.

HOMER, Ga., July 4.—(Special.)—Honorable John M. Holder, former chairman of the Georgia highway board and candidate for governor, delivered the opening address of his campaign here today, being introduced by Honorable S. R. Jolly, head of the American Legion of Banks county.

In addition to advocating sweeping reforms in the state government, Mr. Holder entered into a detailed statement of the results secured by the highway department under his direction, winding up by declaring that the present bright prospects for good roads in Georgia are largely due as a result of the work done by the department under his direction. He quoted the present chairman, Captain J. W. Barnett, as evidence of the truthfulness of this assertion.

His speech, in part, was as follows:

"It is my desire to be governor of Georgia, not only because it is a great honor, but also because I believe I can render a service that will be helpful to the state.

"For 20 years I was a member of the general assembly, eight of which I was speaker of the house. Seven and one-half years I was chairman of the state highway board, during which time I visited every county in the state several times. I learned the state and became acquainted with hundreds of people. My knowledge of Georgia, acquaintance with the people and experience with public affairs I feel will equip me for the governorship and qualify me for efficient service.

"As governor of Georgia, it would be my policy and pleasure to keep in touch with the general assembly and to co-operate with the members of each house and to render to them every possible service.

"No more important task faces the next governor and the next legislature than that of reforming the tax system of the state so that ample revenues can be provided for the necessary expenses of operating the state and its institutions and at the same time cause the burdens of taxation to fall evenly and equitably.

"Provision should be made for a year-to-year reduction in land taxes until the ad valorem system for real estate can be abandoned.

"The income tax law must be perfected so that it will not work any injustices and so that it will not drive any industries from the state nor keep others from locating here.

"Intangible property, such as money, stocks and bonds, must be made to pay its share of the taxes.

"In order that the taxes levied upon the people may be kept as low as possible the state must practice prudent economy in all its affairs. Extravagances in use of the public funds must be stopped.

"The construction of highways has contributed to the great improvement and progress of education in Georgia. In the future there must be no backward step in education. The first thing that is necessary to be done is to meet all the obligations of the state and pay to the cause of education the full amount due it. This should be followed by sufficient funds with which to carry on successfully the school operations of our state but our efforts should not end here.

"Georgia today does not have what you call an 'educational system.' What is needed is to have a survey made of our educational interests and improvements. It should reveal whether funds have been equally and justly distributed to the different school interests of the state and if that has not been done, then in the future this should be done. It should show whether it is wise for the state to buy its school books, to have them published under contract or to establish and operate its own school book publishing plant.

"The state should also take into consideration the institutions where the blind, deaf and dumb are educated and should devise and work out some plan whereby the state can render service to these citizens after they have left their respective institutions of learning by helping them dispose of products.

"During my term of service in the legislature it will be found that there was no man in that body who was a more ardent friend of education nor who did more to try to help develop the health laws of the state along with education.

"At its recent annual convention the County Officers' Association voted indorsement of a resolution brought in by the ordinaries group which called upon the legislature to provide the needed buildings and other facilities at the state sanitarium so that these unfortunates can be removed from the jails and given proper care and treatment. If I am elected governor I will urge the next legislature to provide the funds needed to complete the partly finished buildings at the state sanitarium and to provide for the other sorely needed facilities.

"In making financial provisions for the departments and institutions of our state, the man who pays the bills must be taken into careful consideration.

Proper Budget Needed.

"Failure to properly budget its affairs has brought the state into a serious condition. Appropriations largely in excess of the state's income have been voted by the legislature and as a result the state's institutions have anticipated these excess appropriations and have assumed obligations upon them. Thus the state finds itself with a very large deficit and unable to meet its obligations to schools, to the university and its branches, to the state sanitarium for the insane and to the pensioners.

"If I am elected governor I shall urge the next legislature to create a budget commission to function in place of the present examining commission and state investigating commission, which frequently find themselves in conflict and which have failed to provide the guidance in fiscal matters which the legislature and the governor require. I will propose a budget commission to be composed of the governor, the comptroller-general, the state tax commissioner, the state treasurer, the state auditor, the president of the senate, the chairman of the senate finance committee, the chairman of the senate appropriations committee, the speaker of the house, the chairman of the house ways and means committee and the chairman of the house appropriations committee, with the governor as the ex-officio chairman of the commission and the state auditor as the director of the budget. The director of the budget would be required to gather and prepare information for the commission and to keep the several state departments and institutions within their appropriations. He would work under the authority and direction of the commission in all budget matters.

State Relief.

"Georgia is a great state, and one with almost boundless possibilities but she will never reach the climax of her career nor shine with the brilliance that should characterize her in the great galaxy of states until the man in the field comes into his own and has the benefits and blessings of life to which he is justly entitled. If I am elected governor I will use every possible effort to relieve agriculture of its burdens and to promote her welfare and progress. I shall be equally as much concerned about the laboring man in all lines of work as I would be the farmer.

"In taking care of institutions and departments, we must not forget those who fought in that bloody conflict between the states. The state must make provision for the payment of any unpaid pensions to those old heroes and must, in future, pay their pensions promptly.

"If I am elected governor it will be my pleasure to use whatever influence I may possess in having passed a law that will put the distribution of tag taxes in the hands of some county official so that the citizens of a county will not have to leave home to go to the state capitol but can secure the tags in his own county.

"If I am elected governor, I will send a special message to the legislature asking the appointment of a joint committee of house and senate to give immediate consideration to the reorganization of the state government to the end that unnecessary departments, boards, bureaus and commissions may be abolished and wherever advisable departments may be consolidated.

Record on Highway Board.

"During the six years I was chairman of the state highway board there were sufficient funds to meet the obligations of the department. While this is true, yet the money of the department was not hoarded but was expended as rapidly as it came into the treasury of the state highway board in the construction and maintenance of highways. I have always believed that when money is collected for road purposes that it should be expended as quickly but as economically as possible in the improvement and betterment of the highways and not allowed to remain idle in our financial institutions.

"Due to unprecedented storm and flood damages in both 1928 and 1929 the state highway department found itself face to face with an acute financial problem. Insistent public demands for highway construction, particularly the paving of important through-state roads, had made necessary the formulation of construction programs which anticipated all expected revenues.

"Under the law but $50,000 a year was set aside for emergencies. The storm and flood damages ran into millions and, of course, the emergency fund was totally inadequate.

"Thus, with the highway income anticipated for construction the department found itself without the millions necessary to immediately meet the emergencies caused by the storms and floods. However, the work of repair to highways and bridges had to be done at once and the only course open was for the board to avail itself of the offers of counties and contractors to advance necessary funds and wait until later for payment.

"It was charged in the early part of the year 1929 that the state highway board was in a deplorable financial condition because it owed thirty-five millions of dollars but in a little more than a year after this statement the state auditor declared that every obligation had been met and there was in the treasury in round figures two million dollars.

"The auditor's report showed, contrary to the political claims of some, that there was no suspension of construction work in 1929, but that in that year nine and a half millions of dollars were expended for road building.

"Colonel Tate, during his administration, worked out and recommended a program of highway construction for a definite period of years. This tentative program, if carried out, will pave all the principal highways in Georgia within the next five years.

"The amount due the counties on reimbursement certificates cannot be paid until the system is completed or until the law is changed. This is well known to every one who has read the law or who knows its provisions. It was unfair and unjust to say that the state highway board owed this amount and could not pay it when the same is not due until the system is completed.

"If I am elected governor of Georgia I shall insist that the counties be reimbursed, beginning in 1931, and that they be paid not less than one million dollars the first year and 10 per cent each year thereafter until the entire amount advanced by them has been paid in full.

Quotes Barnett.

"Georgia can boast of having prepared more than 5,000 miles of highways for paving, the roads have been located, graded; culverts built, bridges built and great preparation work done for hard surfacing. Concerning this, Honorable J. W. Barnett, chairman of the state highway board, who is rendering such faithful and efficient service to the state, said that the preparation work for paving during my term of service has made it easy for paving. His statement follows:

"'The people of Georgia must not forget that John Holder and his colleagues on the board laid the foundation for what we who follow them may be able to bring to completion. Under Mr. Holder's administration hundreds upon hundreds of miles of highways were made ready for paving, bridges were built, and the fundamentals were completed that will make possible the development of a comprehensive system of hard surfaced highways in Georgia.'

"It must be remembered that the state had no available funds with which to match federal aid until 1924 when it had about half enough to match the federal aid coming to Georgia. Prior to that time, the state had to rely upon counties to furnish the funds to carry on construction with federal aid funds. In 1925 the amount of state aid funds for construction was still not enough to match federal aid and the counties had to supplement it. It was not until 1926 that there was sufficient funds from the sale of motor vehicle tags and gasoline tax to match federal aid. Yet, despite the fact the state had so little funds until 1927, all this preparation work has been done and the state has paved 2,022 miles of highways and has the base or semi-paved 309 miles on the state aid system.

"I recite these things in detail because of the accusations made by one of the candidates that when I left the state highway department it was in a bankrupt condition. This is an absolute and unqualified misstatement.

Dignified Campaign.

"It is impossible for me to cope with some of my opponents in vicious attacks and bitter abuse. I do not wish to indulge in that kind of debate.

"I shall conduct this campaign as I have conducted all of my campaigns in the past—on clean and dignified plans. I shall not indulge in any mud-slinging and shall avoid personalities unless it becomes necessary for me to go into some in meeting attacks which are made upon me by my opponents."

FREE SCHOOLBOOKS ADVOCATED BY RIVERS

Also Favors Sweeping Tax Changes in Address Delivered at Fitzgerald.

FITZGERALD, Ga., July 4.—(Special.)—Former State Senator E. R. Rivers, candidate for governor, spoke this morning before a large crowd gathered here incident to the annual Fourth of July celebration, stressing the need of economies in the affairs of the state and advocating unreservedly free school books.

He also opposed the ad valorum tax system and favored changes in the Boykin income tax law.

The high point sof his speech were as follows:

"On this sacred day we cannot close our eyes to the fact that our rank and file folk face a condition of actual serfdom through an economic and governmental situation foisted upon us largely by incompetent, unfair and corrupt politics. It is of this condition and its remedy that our people are greatest concerned.

"My sympathy for the weak, the poor and the oppressed is neither shallow nor spasmodic. I have always been for the under dog. Coming as I do from the ranks of the poorest of the poor, I have studied these questions in the lives of the poor as well as in books and political events. My heritage has not been political forebears, my lot has not been remunerative office holding.

"It is evident that if we are to get results, we must look for leadership outside the ranks of professional office holders, and inside the circle of the common people.

"Realizing the relationship of government to the happiness and prosperity of our people and the futility of further effort within the general assembly, after serving in both its branches, until we have a governor 'of the people, by the people and for the people' in fact, instead of in theory, I made the race for governor two years ago, on a specific program of performance included in which was:

High Lights of Platform.

"Nine months schools, teachers promptly and adequately paid and free school books;

"An increase and prompt monthly payments in cash of Confederate pensions;

"A connected system of highways, without taxing real estate, without county matching, and repayment of loans owing counties that had matched;

"Reorganizing the eighty-odd departments, boards and bureaus, into fourteen, namely, agriculture, audits, conservation, corporations, education, eleemosynary, finance, health and hygiene, labor and industry, law, penal and corrective, state and treasury;

"Abolishing ad-valorem tax for state purposes;

"Enactment of a definite system of taxation, and eliminating deficits and emergency nuisance taxes;

"Distribution of automobile license tags through the county officers and collection of all taxes where possible through local county officers;

"Election of president of the state senate by the people, and making him lieutenant-governor;

"Co-operating with the general assembly in making appointments and in securing needed legislative reforms, by observing the axiomatic rules of diplomacy and recognizing the dividing line placed by our fathers between the executive and legislative branches of the government;

"Enactment of corrupt practices law to prevent buying and selling of public offices and spending huge sum in primaries and elections;

"Recognizing the rights of labor to organize for the benefit of those who toil;

"Prevention of interference in government by corporate or special interests.

"The two years intervening have only emphasized the vital need of the adoption of these principles in Georgia. I am fighting for these same principles for the common people this year.

Schools First Love.

"The most important institution for the masses of our people is our free public schools. The common people can never hope to accumulate much property for their children; their hopes of heritage is an education. While I hope and believe that a system of finance can be accomplished during my administration which will avoid the necessity of impairing the proper operation of any of our necessary institutions and departments, at the same time I pledge the masses of our people that I will keep the public schools open and the teachers paid promtly if it necessitates the closing of other institutions or departments in order to do it.

"A textbook is just as necessary for educating a child as is a desk, a school house or a teacher. We can never have 'free public school education' until we have free textbooks.

"Progressive states, south, north, west and east, have adopted free textbooks. The common people of the great state of Texas have been enjoying free textbooks for many years; our neighbors, North Carolina and Florida have free textbooks, and other southern states have adopted this progressive system. The great state of California, the highest in educational standards, is a free textbook state. New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio and all the great progressive states have free textbooks.

"I am for free school books; first, because many boys and girls will be without books if they are left to their own meager resources; second, because the state can purchase them in large quantities at a less price than individuals can buy them separately; third, because it is the duty of every citizen and every property holder, individual and corporation, to contribute to the education and training of the youth in Georgia, and I believe it unfair to place all the burden of educating and training the children upon the shoulders of these poor, over-burdened parents, who already have the burden of feeding and clothing these future citizens who are soon to take up the responsibility of administering our government, formulating our policies, carrying on our business and protecting our flag; fourth, because the corporate wealth which constitutes a large per cent of our total wealth, will be afforded an opportunity to contribute to the cost of textbooks and thus will the burden of the cost of textbooks be evenly divided, and fifth, because I am anxious to raise the standard of education in Georgia, and I believe free textbooks will help do this by insuring every child the necessary books for its education."

Senator Rivers declared he would see that no taxes were levied on land for state purposes if he was elected governor, and advocated reforming the Boykin income tax.

Urgent Need of Tax Relief Feature of Carswell Speech

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., July 4.—(Special.)—George H. Carswell, secretary of state of Georgia, launched his campaign for governor in a speech before a large crowd of voters here this afternoon, in which he dealt at length with the need of tax relief for the owners of visible property. He also outlined his attitude towards the various issues which have been raised since the campaign started.

He also emphasized the importance of education and the bringing of outside capital and industries into the state.

The speaker dubbed as "one of the blackets pages in the history of Georgia" the effort of John M. Holder, an opposing candidate for the governorship, "to perpetuate himself in office over the will of the people."

"If the author of the 'Tragic Era' had all the facts connected with this disgraceful proceeding," Carswell declared, "he should make the reign of Thad Stevens look like '30 cents,' and the poker players at the 'little green house' of Daugherty and Smith, of the Harding administration would be pikers."

Comments on Issues.

In referring to the outstanding issues of the campaign, Mr. Carswell said:

"Every candidate for governor should present his position and his public record on all questions of public interest to the voters of Georgia. Both of these things I am glad to do.

"For the past 10 years those Georgians engaged in farming (and they represent about 75 per cent of the population) have gone through a period of depression that has tried the souls of men. Land became a liability instead of an asset, values were so decreased that farmers with small loans on their lands lost their all, and the individual or companies who were formed to take over the property found themselves with hundred of thousands of tenantless, profitless farms upon their hands.

"Many of the landowners were able to at least keep a claim on their lands by selling every tree large enough to be cut into timber, leaving millions of acres of idle, cut-over lands. Banks cannot be run without depositors, and in the farming sections bank failures grew and multiplied and thousands of depositors lost their life savings. Credit for farming purposes was destroyed and many from the rural sections were forced to seek employment in the towns and cities.

Tax Relief Record.

"With conditions like this there is no wonder that a cry for tax relief has gone up from all over the state from the owners of visible property. Under our ad valorem system this very class of property was carrying 75 per cent of the tax burden. Nearly 10 years ago, in 1922, while a member of the house of representatives and serving on a tax commission, I wrote a minority report as follows:

"'Under the present constitution, it has been clearly demonstrated that it is impossible for the general assembly to enact into law, a fair, just and equitable tax bill. Invisible property excapes taxation, and the burdens of taxation fall most heavily upon that class of citizens and taxpayers who are least able to bear the same. The taxpayer with his home or little farm, and small dealers who can barely make a living are taxed far and beyond their ability to pay, while the real wealth, and citizens with large incomes, escape taxation. With the demands on the state to support its schools, eleemosynary institutions, pensions, and its civil establishment, and with the decreased value on property, a condition confronts us that is almost critical. The people and property that now pay the taxes, can pay no more. They deserve and demand relief. State, county, school and municipal taxes are too high for the present taxpayer to carry the burden. A limited income tax with proper exemptions should reach a class of citizens who enjoy the benefits of government without contributing to its support. Our present system of taxation is the most perfect method of protecting the tax dodger that this class could desire, and they fight every effort made to perfect the laws that would give relief to those now carrying the unjust taxes imposed by the state.'

"This system of taxation continues until today in a large number of counties. Many counties have been forced to buy hundreds of farms under tax sales. I believe that a fair and just income tax in lieu of an ad valorem tax should be levied for state purposes. I believe that the right to tax for county purposes should be carefully safeguarded, because the bulk of taxes now so burdensome are paid as county taxes.

"It is folly and would be the wail of a demagogue to say that the state should decrease the amount appropriated for state purposes. No one would deny the schools every dollar appropriated to them. Who would decrease the amount spent to maintain the state sanitarium, the splendid institution at Alto or any of our eleemosynary institutions With the proper co-operation and consolidation of the state departments, many thousands of dollars may be saved annually. But Georgia cannot afford to be classed as a backward state in maintaining her institutions, in educating her children, in building her roads. She must provide in a just manner the revenue to carry on.

"Georgia does not wish to drive out but to bring in capital. Capital that will help to build a greater Georgia, that will give employment to our people, and furnish a market for the products of our farms.

"Georgia is fast becoming an industrial state. Every industrial plant adds to the prosperity of the town or county where located. These should be encouraged and treated fairly.

Stand on Schools.

"The education of Georgia's children should be and is the most important question before our people. Since the adoption of our present constitution, the state has been handicapped for years in providing a school system of such merit, as it authorized the education of children in the elementary branches only. When the constitution was written, four counties demanded the right to raise funds for educational purposes. Those counties, Glynn, Bibb, Chatham and Richmond, have always been and are today proud of their schools.

"The staunch friend of education, the late Ed McMichael, of Marion county, broke the crust of the iron-bound constitution by creating the district schools, and the constitution since has been patched and amended from time to time until it is at least possible to have the united support of city, county and state for public schools. Naturally I feel a personal pride in the advancement made in removing the constitutional shackles from our schools, for I am the author and joint-author of several of the important amendments. May I be pardoned in saying that I am exceedingly proud of the testimony of one of our greatest educators, Dr. M. L. Brittain, who has stated that I have done more to help the common schools than any man in the legislature since the Civil War.

"I have advocated for years a state school equalization fund and in 1926 I spoke in over 100 counties in favor of the present law. Under the law the rental of the state road and all poll taxes should be paid the common schools. They have received neither. The state now owes the teachers of Georgia $1,149,884.85 for 1928 and $1,291,963 for 1929 and also owes on the Barrett-Rodgers fund $400,000 for 1928 and $400,000 for 1929.

"All of these are binding and just obligations of the state and shall and must be paid. If I am elected governor, every dollar of the same will be paid as the law provides. If elected governor, I will work with those interested in education for a school program that will give our state as fine and complete a system of public schools as any state in the Union.

Politics in Highway Board.

"Next to schools come good roads. Each is dependent upon the other. Neither can travel without the other and progress cannot be made without the aid of both. As a member of the legislature I assisted in passing the bill creating the highway department. The legislature tried to remove it as far as possible from politics, providing that each of the three members should serve as chairman for two years of a six-year term.

"A real beginning was made under this system, but not for long. The law was changed giving the governor the right to name the chairman. As soon as this was done, politics took charge, with the chairman at the steering wheel, headed for the governor's office. Road-building was merely an incident and political trails, some straight, some zig-zag, and some crooked, were laid out to the home or farm of politicians who could deliver their county to the machine. Contractors and material dealers provided the funds, politicians were placed on an already top-heavy payroll, employes became walking and riding delegations, and a department which had been created for service to the people became in a short while a great political menace, one of the most threatening since the dark days of reconstruction.

"These facts were brought before the people by myself and others in 1926, and the voters spoke in large majorities against such methods. In 1927 the governor of Georgia, as was his right and duty, sent the name of an honored Georgian, the present excellent chairman of the highway department, to the senate to be confirmed as a member and chairman of the board. It was admitted that Captain Barnett, a Christian gentleman and a noted engineer, was eminently fitted for the position to which he was appointed. The people of Georgia did not dream that the chairman, who had been defeated for governor, would dare attempt to perpetuate himself in office over the will of the people.

"One of the blackest pages in the history of Georgia was to be enacted. For months before the senate met, the machine had men at work creating a bloc to defeat the rights of the people. Jobs were created, roads were promised, contracts extended, supplies bought, commissions allowed, and road-building was forgotten. Thus, the legislature was at the mercy of the political marauders and the present chairman, Captain Barnett, was denied confirmation and the present candidate for governor, Mr. Holder, continued as chairman long after his term had expired. If the author of the 'Tragic Era' had all the facts connected with this disgraceful proceeding, he should make the reign of Thad Stevens look like '30 cents,' and the poker-players at the 'little green house' of Daugherty and Smith of the Harding administration would be pikers.

"When Mr. Holder saw that the members of the senate had recanted and were willing in extra session to confirm his successor, he reluctantly resigned. When Mr. Tate went into office, what did he find? A bankrupt department with no program for road-building. Of necessity he was forced to suspend road-building for nine months. During the few years that this department had been in existence, nearly one hundred million dollars had been spent with only a few roads completed. During this time the department had created an indebtedness against the state for nearly thirty million dollars, twenty-five million to counties and five million on contracts. Six times as much as the carpet-baggers left us after reconstruction. On account of such methods, the federal government refused to turn over to Georgia the millions allotted us by Uncle Sam. For four years I have denounced such tactics and have demanded that the highway department cease its political activities and start to building roads.

"Where were the other candidates when the rights of the taxpayers were being thus trampled upon? Russell was speaker of the house and backing the machine to the limit. Perry was aiding and abetting and Rivers leading the fight in the senate to retain the candidate of the contractors, as chairman. How can any one of them now object to the contractor naming the governor who will appoint their tools on the highway board?

Published Reports Tell.

"Since the entries closed published reports tell of this trio, Holder, Russell and Rivers, in close conference with their arms around each other, 'just like brothers.' If the Fulton county grand jury would examine the books of some of the big contractors, I feel sure that they would find campaign contributions that would out-smell the $1.10 disinfectant that has made the city council of Atlanta notorious. If the two appointments on the highway board are to be sold to contractors, the candidate should at least advertise for bids.

"Mr. Russell says that I have changed my position on the school equalization fund. He is mistaken. In my speech to which he referred I said 'All of the property in Georgia raises in taxes for state purposes $6,000,000. The users of automobiles will pay in gas and tag tax nearly $20,000,000 a year. That tax is a privilege tax, the privilege of driving their cars on the roads. Certainly they should have roads upon which to drive their cars. To which all of us agree.' Russell has evidently forgotten that when the equalization bill was up in the house that he drew an amendment cutting it to half a million dollars, but his amendment was lost and the schools now receive $2,000,000 from this fund.

"Mr. Perry has charged that I represent the book trust. Such a charge is absolutely untrue and without the slightest foundation. I have never had the slightest connection with any book trust, or company. I have fought for the school children of Georgia all my life and hope the state will some day be financially able to supply them with free books.

"Mr. Perry also says I am a parasite. I have held office for only two years, have increased the revenue in my department in these two years $1,000,000 over the previous two years. He has been in office for 20 years, with five more to go after his defeat for governor, and if he has ever given one day or one order for the benefit of the people, no one has ever been able to discover it. Mr. Perry had the legislature to pass a truck and bus law so he could regulate them. His department gets $35 for qualifying and $25 for registering every truck or bus. This is the fee allowed for "regulating." He has collected nearly $40,000 from the little truck and bus owners, and has spent all of it but $3,200 in having them 'regulated.' Many of the trucks were put out of business and the state lost thousands of dollars in gasoline tax. Perry's regulations are illuminating, electrifying and expensive.

"If elected governor, I will do all in my power to have a real educational program adopted that will give every child in Georgia a chance in life. I will appoint men on the highway board who will give every county a square deal regardless of location or political influence."

REVIVAL OF OLD TIME SPIRIT URGED BY PERRY

More Businesslike Methods Needed in State Affairs, He Declares.

MADISON, Ga., July 4.—(Special.) Declaring that the economic turmoil now abroad in the land is largely as the result of influence of politics in public affairs, James A. Perry, candidate for governor, today addressed the voters of Morgan and surrounding counties at this place.

The greatest public need at this time, according to the speaker, is a revival of the spirit which actuated old-time leaders.

Modernization of the tax laws and the making of home life more attractive in rural sections were also stressed by Mr. Perry.

"Not in the past fifty years has the celebration of the anniversary of the foundation of this government been the occasion for more serious thought than the one we celebrate today. Our primary constitutional laws have been so changed, so frequently misconstrued and incorrectly applied that we are fast approaching the time when the government will have to support its subjects rather than the subjects support the government. An explanation of this changed order of things lies in the fact that in those days, and for a long time following, men were selected for official positions with primary concern for their efficiency, experience and established qualifications for leadership. In the beginning we had men whose sole and prayerful thought was the future of our country, rather than the modern day statesmen whose chief concern is what official act is most strongly calculated to promote political success.

"In a consideration of the economic turmoil now abroad in the land, we find as an explanation, more than any other reason, the fact that our state and federal government are honey-combed with politics and politicians. It is common knowledge that with the convening of our law-making bodies, from session to session, business throughout the natjon trembles with fear until adjournment is had. This shouldn't be so, and if men really worth while, at least a majority, could be induced to take part, the business of the nation would look to the convening of our law-making bodies with the same confidence that we look to a board of directors, equally interested in a pecuniary way with the stockholders on the outside. Until a majority of the law-making bodies of this country are comprised of men of this standard of sincerity we are not going to see a very decided change in the near future.

Revival of Spirit Needed.

"We need a revival of the spirit that prompted citizens to draft men like Wade Hampton, from a home of comfort and congenial personal surroundings and sent him to the United States senate. We need a rebirth of the spirit that called to leadership our Toombs, our Hill and our Stephens. The question is not, have we men of their ability in the present day? But the question is, getting men of their type to enter into the melee and storm which surrounds the filling of public office, made so by men who are making politics a business. Who in Georgia today, whose time is in real demand because of private individual enterprise, will enter into the unpleasant atmosphere surrounding every political campaign? The time is here when the voters of this state must put their stamp of disapproval upon time-serving politicians and blaze anew a path sufficiently inviting to bring back into governmental service the real statesmanship of our citizenry abroad in the land. There are many who would make the personal sacrifice, yet they refuse to consider it because of the conviction that it means measuring lancets with "two-by-fours" engaged in cheap billingsgate and today's system of political trades and trickery.

"The paramount question confronting Georgia voters today, are we ready to quit playing politics and take the affairs of our state government seriously, to the extent of selecting men free of political feuds, prejudices, bias and selfish interest? I entered the campaign for governor to wrest Georgia from the control of the school book trusts; the control of certain road and certain highway construction forces; to rid our state of the useless political bureaus, commissions and departments. It is a crying shame that this sort of politics has been carried on until today, of those who have any gainful occupation, one of every ten is being supported by the other nine. No business in the world can last under any such top-heavy operating costs, and you are not going to get rid of it until you have selected men to office free of the old political hatred and prejudices now before us in the present campaign.

"We have been too long content to line up on either side of two political prize-fighters from one administration to another, the chief concern being which one shall be spared to persecute his victim. This, in fact, is the real issue between Mr. Holder and Mr. Carswell in the present gubernatorial campaign. Shall Holder survive to persecute Carswell, or shall Carswell survive to persecute Holder? They have been fighting and hating each other so long that both are, by the very laws of nature, disqualified from an intelligent, impartial discharge of any official duty. The lieutenants of the type of road machinery and road construction forces referred to are actively supporting Mr. Holder and a similar representation of the book trusts are supporting Mr. Carswell.

Issues Should Control.

"This conglomeration, supplemented by the boyish ambition of our two young friends, led me to the conclusion that the time is here when some one should step out as the representative of the masses and restore order from the chaotic condition in which we find ourselves. Had there been an outstanding candidate, or the prospects of one, to whom the citizens could look with confidence in the present campaign, I would have cheerfully supported such a candidate with as much interest and satisfaction as I am waging my own campaign. The time has come when Georgia must look to measures as the controlling questions in political campaigns rather than selfish ambitions.

"Typical of many unbusinesslike requirements of our laws can best be realized in the present practice of requiring people to come or send all the way to Atlanta to buy automobile tags. No business in the world handling such a proposition would do less than to have some one in each county seat throughout the state in charge of a sale of tags for the convenience of the local communities. This, I heartily favor.

"We must modernize our tax laws just as other progressive states have done; we must do away with the antiquated system of ad valorem as a means of supporting our state government; we must make opportunities for personal gain and home-life more inviting in the rural sections of our state. If elected governor, I shall, on the convening of the legislature, submit a definite, progressive, economic plan, and if the people of our state are ready to quit playing politics, I promise you in the next four years an improved condition that would cause us all to wonder why it has been so long delayed. Our state highway department must be kept free from political interference, and you will never do it as long as selfish interests meddle with the political affairs of our state."

All Entangling Alliances Opposed in Harris Speech

NEEL'S GAP, Ga., July 4.—(AP)—United States Senator William J. Harris, in an address read here today by his brother, General Peter C. Harris, declared himself opposed "to entangling alliances of all kinds," and said he would do all in his power "to keep our boys from going to war."

Delayed in Washington by his senatorial duties, Mr. Harris at the last moment sent his regrets to the committee in charge of a barbecue and celebration here near the site of the proposed American Legion memorial on Blood mountain, and arranged for the reading of his address. Numerous members of the American Legion, in pilgrimage from their state convention at Gainesville, heard the address.

Mr. Harris avoided much direct reference to the existing political campaign, in which he is opposed for re-election by John M. Slaton. Instead he complimented the north Georgians on their climate and scenery, said he had voted each year for larger funds for building of good roads, "and shall continue my efforts to get more money for good roads from the federal government to match our state funds."

He also warned against invasion of the foreign-born as a threat to economic conditions in this country, and said that had not congress restricted immigration a few years ago, "a majority of the citizens of our country would have been foreigners and our government would have been controlled by them."

"It would no longer have been a country for Americans who are descended from the soldiers who fought in the Revolution," Mr. Harris said. "Most of the people in what is called the mountain counties of north Georgia can trace their ancestors to a Revolutionary soldier. There is no purer Anglo-Saxon blood in the United States than that of the people who made their home in this section, and you have every reason to be proud of it."

Mr. Harris then told of his efforts to restrict immigration, especially as applying to Mexican laborers, and then referred to "entangling alliances."

"Some men of great wealth, who spend money to buy elections, feel that the government should be controlled by them, and that even our soldier and sailor boys should be sent to all parts of the world to hold elections and collect debts owed Wall Street. I opposed sending our marines to Nicaragua and Mexico for this purpose.

"The late Senator Watson, who served with me in the senate, and I voted against the five-power pact, which was an alliance with four other countries. I am opposed to entangling alliances of all kinds, and will always do everything in my power to keep our boys from going to war."

High Point of Address.

"The summers I have spent in this section with my family are among the most delightful of my life and it is always a pleasure to come among you. I feel sorry for Georgians who feel they must spend their summers in Europe instead of these mountains. The climate and scenery of Switzerland do not surpass that of north Georgia and Carolina.

"I have been greatly interested in the building of roads through this and all other sections of our state and was here at the opening of this Neel's Gap road. It so happens that I am on the committee that makes appropriations for good roads, and I have voted each year for larger funds for this purpose. I shall continue my efforts to get more money for good roads from the federal government to match our state funds. I believe the federal government should appropriate even more for this purpose so as to lighten the burden of our states and counties. I hope to see the time when every farm house has a good road leading to a market, school and church.

"Our forefathers who fought for the independence of our country never intended that it should become a dumping ground for people of all countries of the world. Many of these foreigners do not understand our laws or our government. Before the war a million foreigners came to this country in one year, and if we had not passed the law restricting immigration, within only a few years, a majority of the citizens of our country would have been foreigners and our government would have been controlled by them.

"It would no longer have been a country for Americans who were descended from the soldiers who fought in the Revolution. Most of the people in what is called the mountain counties of north Georgia can trace their ancestors to a Revolutionary soldier. There is no purer Anglo-Saxon blood in the United States than that of the people who made their home in this section and you have every reason to be proud of it.

"In Chicago, New York and many cities of our country the foreign-born are a menace. They sell their votes to the highest bidder, and it gives men of great wealth, who spend their money to buy votes, an influence that the men who struggled and suffered to make this country never intended that wealth should exercise.

"When we were fighting for white supremacy in Georgia by disfranchising the purchasable negro vote, some city members of the legislature and politicians opposed it so vigorously. They fought us until the very last. The country counties wanted to get rid of the purchasable negro vote. After getting rid of the ignorant, negro vote in the south, we find that the negroes who went north and an element of the foreign vote in the north can be bought just the same as the negroes.

Greatest Menace.

"There is today no greater menace to our country than the use of money in elections. It is filling our congress, both houses, with men of wealth, largely from the cities. They create fake issues to ride into office, and then vote increased tariff duties that benefit the wealthy at the expense of the poor, and place the burden of taxation on those least able to bear it. They also vote to protect property rights as against personal, human rights.

"Not many years ago, before senators were elected by the people, men of wealth bribed members of the legislatures to vote for them and the result was such, that for a time the senate was referred to as a millionaires' club. These senators favored wealth in all legislation. This was temporarily changed by the election of senators by the people, but candidates of wealth in many states are again trying to buy seats in the senate. They seem to think that a United States senatorship, notwithstanding the great responsibility of the office, should be put on the block and sold to the highest bidder. They think a man of small means should not even aspire to the United States senate. Such use of money in elections would have deprived Georgia of the valuable services of most of her public men such as General John B. Gordon, under whom my father fought; Alfred Colquitt, Ben Hill, A. O. Bacon, Steve Clay, Hoke Smith and other great Georgians. The man who buys his election to the United States senate, as did Newberry, of Michigan; Smith, of Illinois, and Vare, of Pennsylvania, had they been seated, would have felt under no obligations to serve the masses of the people. Only recently Mrs. McCormick, of Illinois, the daughter of Mark Hanna, admitted that she spent over a quarter of a million dollars for her election to the senate. I am proud of the fact that in the state of Georgia no one can buy a seat in the United States senate.

"In this county of Union you elected one of your citizens, Joseph E. Brown, who made a great governor and United States senator, but it was not the use of money that influenced you good people of Union county to elect him. It was the sterling character and ability of the man.

"This morning at Gainesville, I passed the cemetery where rests the remains of your former congressman and governor, Allen D. Candler, a faithful and useful public servant who never used a dollar to buy his election. He was affectionately called the one-eyed plowboy of pigeon roost. There is no reason why a boy reared on the farm at pigeon roost or elsewhere should not have the same chance to aspire to any position of honor in the gift of the people if he makes the effort.

Mexican Labor.

"I hope I may be pardoned for a personal reference. I am a member of the immigration committee, and when the bill restricting immigration was passed I fought to include Mexico, but was voted down. I have been fighting ever since to have the law amended, so as to shut out this cheap Mexican labor, and I expect to succeed at the next session of congress. A bill of mine has already passed the senate and has been favorably recommended by the house committee. It is expected that it will pass the house in December.

"This cheap Mexican labor comes into Texas and Oklahoma and produces a million or more bales of cotton which increases our surplus cotton, brings down the price, and forces every cotton grower in the south to sell his cotton at less than the cost of production. When the farmers prosper all of our people are benefited and we should do everything for them.

"Some men of great wealth, who spend money to buy elections, feel that the government should be controlled by them and that even our soldier and sailor boys should be sent to all parts of the world to hold elections and collect debts owed Wall Street. I opposed sending our marines to Nicaragua and Mexico for this purpose.

"The late Senator Watson, who served with me in the senate, and I voted against the five-power pact, which was an alliance with four other countries. I am opposed to entangling alliances of all kinds, and will always do everything in my power to keep our boys from going to war."

Three band concerts are to be presented to radio listeners today.

The first, at 8:30 a. m., will be an hour's program by the U. S. Army band, playing from Washington over the Columbia Broadcasting system.

In the evening the National Broadcasting Company will provide two concerts, one at 6:30 on WJZ and stations by the Edwin Franko Goldman band, consisting of numbers by modern Russian composers, and the other at 7:30 via WSB and network, by Arthur Pryor's band. It will include "The Washington Post March," written after John Philip Sousa's first visit to a newspaper office.

The first of a series of "pop" concerts by an orchestra directed by Cesare Sodero is planned for 6 p. m. via WEAF and stations. The orchestra will be assisted by the Salon Singers.

"Uncle Hiram," a rural melodrama, is announced for Hank Simmons Showboat on WGST and chain at 7 p. m.

Minnie Blauman will direct the Columbia Grenadiers in a program of popular music at 8:45 this morning over WGST and the CBS.

Kenyon Congdon, baritone, accompanied by the French Trio will present selections by French composers at 2:30 this afternoon over WGST and the CBS.

* * * *

"Uncle Hiram," a rural melodrama popularized years ago by the late Ira Woodhill, will be presented aboard Hank Simmons' Showboat, "The Maybelle," tonight at 7 over WGST and the CBS. The genial Hank will play the title role.

An innocent country girl has been deceived into a fake marriage by a scoundrel from the city. Her father rushes to New York where he hopes to find the villain and avenge his wronged daughter. Due to his unfamiliarity with city life, he becomes involved in many amusing episodes before he finally achieves his purpose.

One of the highlights is the scene at the saw-mill. Here the villain, bent on further evil, attempts to send the hero through the huge circular saw tied to a log, but his plans are foiled in the nick of time.

"The Washington Post March," written after John Philip Sousa's first visit to a newspaper office, will introduce Arthur Pryor and his General Electric band over WSB and the NBC at 7:30 tonight. Pryor has arranged "Reminiscences of Chopin," recalling some of the better known excerpts from that composer' work, for this concert. Floyd Gibbons, journalist and soldier of fortune, will describe another adventure in science.

Paramount Reopens Today

After Complete Remodelling

This morning, at 11 o'clock, doors of the new Paramount theater will open and Atlanta will witness, for the first time, the completely remodeled and redecorated palace of amusement which is classed as the finest theater in the entire southern chain of Publix houses.

After two weeks of day and night work by acoustical experts, the Paramount has been pronounced as the most perfect house known for sound pictures reproduction, in addition to it being one of the most beautiful amusement structures known.

Changes in the construction of the building have chiefly concerned the entrance and the lobbies. Two of the large pillars in the front have been removed, their place taken by a giant steel supporting girder. The promenade at the back of the main floor has been lengthened by removal of the offices and rest rooms to the second floor, while the oval well at the rear has been entirely floored over, the space converted into a most attractive lounge.

New decorations throughout and many new lighting effects have been installed. The entire seating equipment of the theater has been replaced with the most modern chairs, especially designed not only for comfort but to aid in the perfecting of the acoustical properties of the house.

Coincident with the renovation of the house, the Paramount has adopted a new program policy. Beginning with today the weekly program changes will be made Saturday instead of Monday. They will include, in addition to the finest talking screen features procurable, colorful stage unit presentations, created in the Publix stage studios at New Orleans and sent directly here. There will be a group of beautiful dancing girls, known as the "Paramount Rockets," and several of the highest priced individual performers, dancers, vocalists and comedians, each week.

For the opening week the stage presentation is "Valentines on Parade," with Stella Powers, coloratura soprano; Kendall Capps, eccentric dancer, and Bobby Pinkus, comedian, occupying the star roles.

In addition to the stage shows, the Paramount has added a splendid symphony orchestra, under the baton of Lou Forbes, one of Hollywood's youngest and finest conductors. The orchestra will present today and next week a special presentation overture, "Living Masters." Gladys Lyle, the popular little organist, remains in her daily short console programs, with the customary short subjects adding variety to each bill.

The feature screen attraction for the first week is the epochal record of the most romantic adventure of the twentieth century, "With Byrd at the South Pole."

New Program Opens For Fox Fans Today

Beginning a complete new program, the Fox theater presents today, "Not Damaged," a Fox Movietone feature, with Lois Moran, Walter Byron and Robert Ames in the featured roles, the Fanchon and Marco idea, "Ivory," with Med Ruick at the head of his stage band, and Enrico Leide and the Fox Grand orchestra playing as the overture "The Student Prince," a miniature musical reproduction of the popular light opera, with "Serenade," "Deep in My Heart" and "The Drinking Song," featured, and Dwight Brown, the popular "organ ace," at the mammoth organ console.

"Not Damaged" is a pleasing light comedy drama with a distinct O. Henry ending, in which the hero and the villain turns out not to be the villain and the shopgirl is protected from an unexpected quarter.

"Ivory," the stage presentation, has a distinctly unique feature aside from the principals in that each of the Sunkist Beauties turns out to be a splendid pianist, and the finale finds them all playing pianos, headed by Hy Meyer, the comedy pianist of the act.

Coalition Cabinet Formed in Finland

HELSINGFORS, Finland, July 4.—(AP)—A coalition cabinet was successfully formed today to replace the Kallio government, which resigned yesterday after a crisis over proposals to combat communist activity in Finland. ex-Senator Svin Hufvud is the new premier. J. H. Procope continues as minister of foreign affairs.

When the government measure to prevent printing of communist newspapers was passed by parliament on Wednesday, it was understood that the government, dominated by the Agrarian party, would resign and make way for a coalition that would prepare active anti-communist legislation.

Police Commissioner Mingles With 'Reds'

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—Police Commissioner Mulrooney mingled unrecognized today among a crowd of communists gathered at 110th street and Fifth avenue to protest against the killing of Gonzales who was shot by a policeman.

Gonzales was shot after he is alleged to have knocked down and beaten a policeman in a riot caused as police broke up a parade to the bier of another communist. They asserted their comrade had been clubbed to death by police although the official finding was death by apoplexy.

Blazes Still Raging In Wyoming Forests

LARAMIE, Wyo., July 4.—(AP)—Roaring through valuable stands of highly inflammable balsam timber, a forest fire which has raged since Monday on French creek in the Medicine Bow National Forest defied the efforts of more than 400 fire fighters today.

H. C. Hilton, supervisor, reported he had succeeded in keeping a control line on the south front of the eight-mile fire line. On the north front, however, the fire was raging out of control.

Belgian Coal Miners Stage Walk-Out

BRUSSELS, July 4.—(AP)—A strike of 25,000 miners today brought about a serious condition in Belgian coal mines.

The strike originally arose as a protest against old age pension rates, but has been intensified by the demands of foreign miners who had been working in Belgian pits. Many of them have been laid off and are demanding work from the authorities.

A mixed commission will meet on Monday to attempt to settle the strike.

Woman in Radio Suit Commits Suicide

INDIANAPOLIS, July 4.—(AP)—Mrs. Josephine Dazey, 39, who a few days ago was made a defendant with her husband in a damage suit filed by neighbors on allegations that the Dazey radio was played so loud and so continuously as to be a public nuisance was found dead in her home today with a bullet wound in her head. She, apparently, had committed suicide.

Her husband, Grant Dazey, said she had been humiliated by the suit and since its filing had been despondent.

The suit asked $5,000 damages because of alleged annoyance by the radio. A judge took the case under advisement after urging the owners to be reasonable in their use of the radio.

FLINT POLICE SEIZE COMMUNIST MATERIAL

FLINT, Mich., July 4.—(AP)—Communist party membership application blanks and a large number of signed membership cards of the Auto Workers' International Union were seized by police in a raid early today on the home of John Werner, one of the striking Fisher Body Company employes. Werner was held on a charge of possessing a weapon without a permit.

The police also arrested at Werner's home Joseph Yourkowski and William Glantz, both 18, possessed the communist cards, the police said.

Police Chief C. J. Scarvada today informed Cecil Comstock, chairman of the strike committee, that picketing of the plant would not be permitted today and that a parade could not be held. The plant has been closed until Monday, but the strike committee had planned to picket the factory "to keep the strike advertised."

Government Gives Salmon High Rating

Analysis by government experts has determined that one pound of fresh salmon will furnish 18 per cent of the energy a man needs daily, 69 per cent of the protein, 10 per cent of the calcium, 57 per cent of the phosphorous and 19 per cent of the iron. Canned salmon, vacuum packed by the most modern methods, is brought to your table fresh as the day it was caught. As the bones are softened in processing and rendered suitable for consumption, the government bulletin says, the mineral content of the canned salmon is rated very high.

DOBBS, OZBURN, YORK TO POST BONDS TODAY

Bonds of $1,000 probably will be posted today by Alderman Guy Dobbs, Councilman J. T. Ozburn and ex-Councilman Harry York, who were indicted Thursday by the Fulton county grand jury on charges of bribery and being interested in a city contract. The indictments are based on the purchase by the city of two street sweepers in 1928.

Investigation of city graft conditions will probably be continued by the incoming July-August term grand jury. Solicitor-General John A. Boykin is preparing to take up the matter with the grand jury which will be sworn in Monday morning by Judge John D. Humphries, of Fulton superior court.

Among those drawn in an additional list of prospective grand jurors is Thomas J. Lyon, of 683 Peachtree, N. E., who was foreman of the November term grand jury which began the city hall investigation. Other men on the additional list are: F. L. Butler, Rivers road, Buckhead; C. H. Livsey, East Point; Hugh Richardson, West Pace's Ferry road, Buckhead; Dan Michalove, 1325 Peachtree; Gillespie Sadler, 20 Thirteenth, N. E.; H. E. Fisher, 361 Tenth; H. C. Mather, 229 Peachtree, N. E.; D. I. MacIntyre, Jr., 609 Norris building; J. N. Landers, 1545 Gordon, S. W.; W. H. Howard, 397 North avenue, N. E.; Kendall Weisiger, 206 Seventeenth, N. E.; D. A. McDuffie, East Point; W. Y. Morrison, 87 1-2 Euclid, N. E.

Emphatic denial of wrongdoing was made Friday by Alderman Dobbs and Councilman Ozburn. "I know nothing about the transaction in connection with which I am supposed to have been bribed. I have been guilty of no wrongdoing," Dobbs said.

Ozburn said "The only purchases of street sweepers since I have been chairman have been by a special committee of which I was not a member. I know nothing of any bribes paid to anyone."

Civil Service Plan Is Approved by Club

Civil service for city and county employes was approved in a record vote at a meeting of the Atlanta Intercivic Association Thursday night. The body also expressed its approval of a budget system for county expenditures.

In a report by the standing committee on registration and suffrage it was pointed out that much time is wasted by the provisions which require a citizen to register at separate places for state and city elections. It was also said that the fact that citizens are required to register annually for city elections causes many to lose interest and fail to register.

CHURCHES PLAN BIG SERVICE OUT OF DOORS

Resuming the 15-year-old custom, six of the Protestant churches in the vicinity of the state capitol Sunday night will vacate their respective auditoriums and will join in the first open air service of the season beginning at 7:45 o'clock.

The Rev. Dr. C. R. Stauffer, pastor of the First Christian church and chairman of a special committee in charge of the union services, will introduce the first speaker, the Rev. John L. Yost, of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer. The choir of Dr. Yost's charge will furnish music and ushers from all the participating organizations will assist in seating the large crowds which are expected for the two months the arrangement lasts. An orchestra directed by R. B. Mayfield, of the Second Baptist church, will furnish music.

All the pastors and several visiting ministers are slated to occupy the pulpit at the various meetings to be held this year.

Other participating churches in addition to the First Christian and the Church of the Redeemer are Central Presbyterian, of which the Rev. S. R. Oglesby is pastor; St. Philip's cathedral, of which Dean Raimundo De Ovies is head; Second Baptist, headed by the Rev. Dr. E. M. Poteat, and the Trinity Methodist, of which the Rev. Dr. Homer Thompson is pastor.

Seats for 1,000 will be provided and a temporary pulpit has been erected. In the event of inclement weather the services will be held at one of the church auditoriums.

VETERANS EXPECTED TO RECEIVE PAY SOON

Preparations to pay pensions to Confederate veterans and their widows on the basis of $30 a month are moving forward in anticipation of the return of Governor L. G. Hardman to the state capitol early next week, it was learned Friday.

Colonel Robert deT. Lawrence, state pension commissioner, has prepared a requisition for the necessary funds which will be delivered to the chief executive immediately on his return. Colonel Lawrence Friday expressed confidence that the governor would be able to carry out his plan to pay pensions on the increased schedule adopted by the last legislature.

Governor Hardman two weeks ago, after a conference with the pension commissioner, announced that an effort would be made to pay the increased pension, and that the larger sum would be paid if the money were available in the treasury.

Pensions this year have been paid on the old basis of $50 a quarter, due both to the financial condition of the state and a technicality in the appropriation bill accompanying the increased pension. George M. Napier, attorney-general, has said that if money is available to pay the pensions on the increased scale he would not interpose any objection.

Discussing the pension situation Friday the attorney-general suggested and intimated that at the next session of the legislature a proposal might be made to amend the pension law, so that a pension could be paid the wife of a veteran who has entered the Old Soldiers' home.

Text of Senor Perez' communication follows:

"Permit me to extend most cordial congratulations, in the name of the Cuban government (which I have the honor to represent here), the Cuban people and myself, on the occasion of the glorious anniversary which you are celebrating on July 4."

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

THE LITTLE MUSKRAT WHO FORGOT.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Appalling you will find the cost
Of what forgetfulness has lost.
—Old Mother Nature.

Forgetting is a bad habit. My goodness, I don't know of any habit that is much worse than forgetting. It leads to all kinds of trouble. It not only gets the ones who forget into trouble, but it gets other people into trouble also. If people never forgot, this world would be a much happier and safer place in which to live.

One of Jerry Muskrat's children was forgetful. He didn't mean to forget. It wasn't willful forgetfulness. It was just the result of habit. Now, this little Muskrat had been warned, as had all his brothers and sisters, to always stay close to the water's edge. Some of them couldn't see why they should not climb up the bank of the Smiling Pool and make little trips out on the Green Meadows whenever they wanted to. Jerry and their mother explained to them that there were certain fur-coated folk on land who would like nothing better than a young Muskrat now and then for dinner. But, never having seen any of these dangerous persons, it was very difficult for the little Muskrats to really believe in them.

One moonlight night the forgetful little Muskrat sat at the edge of the water with his back to the land. The shore was low at this point. The water in front of the little Muskrat was very shallw. It was not deep enough for him to dive. He would have to swim out several feet before he could dive. He had been warned that this was not a safe place for young Muskrats. His mother had told him this. So had his father. They had explained how an enemy might creep up behind him and catch him before he could reach water deep enough to be safe.

Now, the forgetful little Muskrat had always remembered it until this moonlight night. Then, as he was swimming past this place, something on the shore caught his attention and he forgot all about the warnings he had had. He swam ashore and, having satisfied his curiosity, he sat down. He was tired and this seemed a good place to rest.

Now, it just hapened that Reddy Fox had taken it into his head to visit the Smiling Pool that evening. It was some time since Reddy had been over there and he knew nothing about Jerry Muskrat's big family. He didn't really expect to catch anybody over there. Nevertheless, he approached the Smiling Pool just as carefully as if he were certain of catching some one. As he drew near his keen eyes saw a movement in the grass on the edge of the shore. Instantly Reddy flattened himself out. Then he began to creep forward very slowly, very carefully. He tested the wind and made sure that it was blowing in his face. As long as it was blowing that way, it would carry his scent behind him.

Foot by foot Reddy crept forward. Every few feet he stopped to look. "That looks like a great big Meadow Mouse," thought Reddy. "Yes, sir, that's what it looks like, but never in my life have I seen a Meadow Mouse as big as that. It may be a Rat. That's an idea. I wonder if it can be a young Muskrat. Well, I'll soon find out."

Foot by foot Reddy crept forward. How clever he was! He didn't make a sound. Every time the young Muskrat turned his head, Reddy dropped flat on the grass. He was so near now that he could see clearly that it was a young Muskrat. Reddy knew all about the situation there. He knew that the water was not deep enough for that Muskrat to dive. He knew that if he could get just a little bit nearer, he could rush that young Muskrat and the latter wouldn't have a chance to escape.

The forgetful young Muskrat turned his head and looked over his shoulder. Then with a squeak of fright he started for the water. He was just too late. The black paws of Reddy Fox pinned him down before he could reach deep enough water for a dive. A moment later Reddy was trotting across the Green Meadows with that forgetful young Muskrat in his mouth. So now Jerry Muskrat's big family numbered only seven. But, though she missed the two that were gone, Mrs. Muskrat felt that even seven were plenty when it came to keeping them out of trouble.

CRACKERS TAKE PAIR FROM BEARS, 14-10, 8-7

CHICAGO, Ill., July 4.—Being a country boy with more curiosity than ordinary, your correspondent cornered a man about town in New York who was close to Mayor Walker's office and occasionally inside and asked him a lot of simple questions about these celebrations staged in honor of returning heroes.

The man about town was surprised at my innocence probably, but he put the public welcome on the conversational operating table and dissected it. Your correspondent was curious to learn what part of the ovation was artificial and what part spontaneous. In other words, just what it all meant anyhow as regards the actual popularity of the honoree.

In the first place, Jimmy Walker has a flair for the sort of public demonstration that has been given General Pershing, Gertrude Ederle, Charles Lindbergh, Admiral Byrd and Bobby Jones.

To use the urbane expression of the man about town, "It is right down Jimmy's alley." To quote again from my informant, "Jimmy likes nothing better than to say a few words into a loud speaker on the steps of city hall before a big crowd, provided he does not have to get up early to do it."

And then your correspondent learned that back of all this Mayor Walker considers that the city of New York, due to its importance and strategic location as the port of entry, has that imminent quality of representing the United States people. New York voices the spirit of the land of the free and the home of the brave and does not mind voicing it at all. It is a civic responsibility that may have been artificially created in the first place, but which now has become a tradition.

HOW NEW YORK DOES IT.

So when it appears expedient and fitting to stage a municipal welcome to a man or woman who has done something fine the machinery of the welcome is set in motion from city hall.

The city details its official launch, the Macom, to go out and meet the distinguished guest. The way through customs is cleared through official channels. Fireboats are detailed to join the nautical parade and make a demonstration. Harbor craft privately owned follow suit as the whim of the masters of those vessels directs.

If the returning hero is popular the blasts from whistles and sirens will be generous. In Bobby's case it was deafening.

TICKER-TAPE AND CONFETTI.

There is no request or demand made on those employed in office buildings downtown to throw confetti and ticker-tape. In fact there is a constant pressure exerted to check it. Office employes manufacture their own confetti by tearing up telephone books. This costs the telephone company a tidy sum every time a great man comes home. And ticker tape is not free even in New York.

Stenographers and clerks downtown apparently take a pride in their roles. Sometimes they arrange to blow paper particles out of a waste basket with a portable electric fan. And a technique in throwing ticker-tape has developed. All try to lasso the honor guest with their tape. One succeeded in Bobby's case. That is no small feat if attempted from the 30th floor.

The system of launching the tape is interesting. The core and a small section of about an inch in diameter is pushed out from the center. This central portion is thrown out into the air. Meanwhile the bulk of the roll of tape is held in the hand and the tape is unwound from the center outward. The weight of the unwound tape and the vagaries of the wind cause it to unwind very rapidly and in intricate spirals.

AIDS THE UNEMPLOYED.

And afterward there is a tremendous lot of debris in the streets that necessitates the city's putting on an extra force of white wings to remove. That gives employment for a day or two to the surplus vagrants.

Whether the welcome is nationally broadcast from city hall depends on whether radio corporations are interested in the honoree. In the case of Bobby Jones there would have been no way to keep the radio people out of it. Bobby was good material.

This exposition may seem superfluous to some, but it cleared up a lot of dark points for your correspondent. There was a world of spontaneity in the welcome New York extended Bobby. He really is more of a public hero in New York than he is in Atlanta. Behind that welcome was more genuine admiration than usually marks such functions.

By Ed Danforth.
Constitution Sports Editor.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 4.—Bobby Jones stepped off the Broadway Limited in Chicago today into the midst of a noisy Fourth of July celebration that might have sounded to him like an echo of that New York hullabaloo.

Bob, and his father and mother, accompanied by Cyril Tolley, hurried out to the taxicab entrance. And there, as Bobby was climbing into a cab, a battery of flash guns exploded and took him and his picture by surprise. These newspaper photographers are the darndest fellaws; they always know everything that is going on.

The Jones group went to the Blackstone for a day of rest to break the rip to Minneapolis. Bobby, however, was itching to feel a golf club in his hands once more. So he accepted the invitation of Melvin Traylor, Chicago financier, to play Old Elm course.

Bobby and Cyril Tolley played Don Moe and Bob Gardner. It was a casual affair and the boys picked up on several holes. No cards were kept. The round served Bobby as a chance to loosen his cramped shoulder muscles and relax generally after a long period of links inactivity.

BOB'S MOTHER IS FINE.

Mrs. Jones is in fine health and spirits and had luncheon with the party. They leave tonight for Minneapolis and Saturday Bobby will take his first spin over Interlachen.

Reporters who cornered Bobby at the Union station this morning found him courteous but brief. He answered questions readily, taking the shortest possible verbal cut to the point.

As an interviewee Bobby is rapidly developing a technique that is admirable. He forces reporters to use their wits and ask plenty of questions. Bobby waits. He leans back on his heels and spars with them, always ready with a smile and nearly always coining an answer in a single sentence.

REFUSES ANSWER.

Finally a Chicago reporter asked, "Tell us about the game you played with the Prince of Wales."

Bobby came out of the bunker in one shot. "I can't talk about that," he said smiling. To my humble way of thinking, Bobby Jones, of Atlanta corporation counsel, already is being educated for the diplomatic service these days. Some future president will overlook a bet if Robert is not sent as an ambassador with a portfolio instead of a golf bag.

'QUEEN HELEN' TAKES FOURTH CHAMPIONSHIP

By Frank H. King,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 4.—(AP)—Helen Wills Moody won her fourth successive Wimbledon tennis championship today by beating Elizabeth Ryan, 6-2, 6-2, in the women's singles final but that was only an incident in the Fourth of July play that brought about four All-American title matches at Wimbledon—an unprecedented outcome of England's classic tennis meeting.

So many Americans are elbowing each other out of the path to titles that the tournament must stretch into a third week to give them all an equal chance. Wilmer Allison, the slim Texan, plays Big Bill Tilden for the men's singles crown tomorrow. With Johnny Van Ryn, Allison today won a fine match from the Britons, J. Colin Gregory and Ian G. Collins, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3, and will therefore play in the men's doubles final against George Lott and John Doeg, who whipped the last of the French, the great doubles team of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon.

DOUBLES SHIFTED.

So that Allison won't have to play two hard final matches in one day, the doubles play will be set over to Monday afternoon. Besides Allison and Tilden, the other title play tomorrow will pit Mrs. Moody and Miss Ryan against Edith Cross, of San Francisco, and Sarah Palfrey, Boston miss, in the women's doubles final, while Jack Crawford and Miss Ryan will play Daniel Prenn and Miss Krahwinkel for the mixed doubles championship.

Thus the finalists in men's singles and doubles and women's singles and doubles are all Americans while Miss Ryan is in the mived doubles.

Today this versatile American woman veteran complained because nobody in the big tennis galleries seemed to love her. Living in England, she is not an American but was born in America so she's not English.

QUEEN HELEN FORCED.

Nevertheless she gave Mrs. Moody a run for her title, although the scores do not indicate it. Queen Helen of the strong right arm is rarely called upon to cover court on the run but time after time today Miss Ryan, with one of her delicate chop shots which drop just over the net, made Helen run for it.

When the champion would barely reach the ball in time to tap it back across the net, Miss Ryan would punch it for a certain point winner. It was spectacular and entertaining and a little undignified for the queen of tennis. Good strategy that it was Miss Ryan couldn't do it often enough to win many games although she made a match of it all the way through.

Elizabeth Ryan was playing in Wimbledon finals as long ago as 1912 and if this tennis star is only as old as her game she still is younger than some of the touted babes of tennis.

EAGLE SCREAMS.

The larger part of the 15,000 gallery at Wimbledon probably didn't realize that the Fourth of July means anything to Americans but the particular eagle that looks after tennis certainly screamed all over the Wimbledon arena as first one then another American victory was scored.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald saw Mrs. Moody retain her title and also saw George Lott and Johnny Doeg start the American celebration by beating Cochet and Brugnon in a brilliant battle. The Americans hammered steadily at Brugnon and finally swept through Cochet's service to clinch the final game of a victory that materially heightened the United States chances of regaining the Davis cup next month.

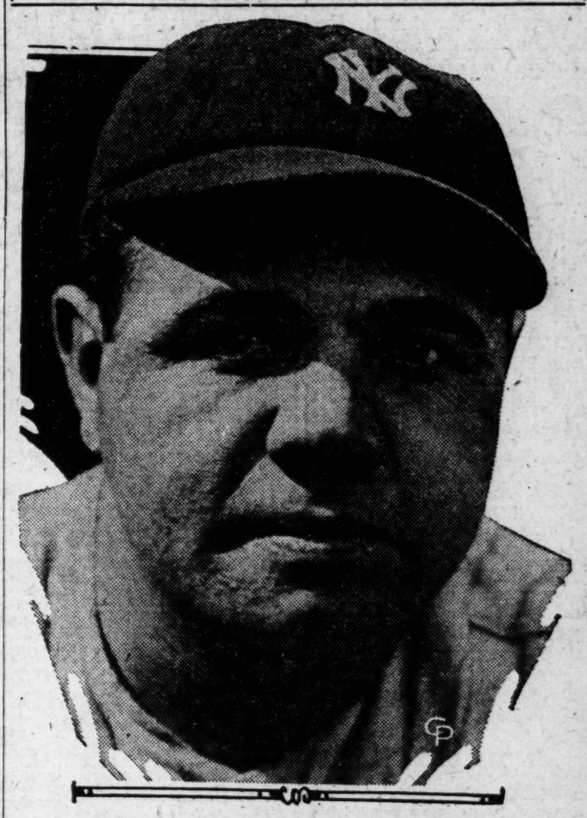

Mr. MacDonald left, however, before the most spectacular match of the afternoon, the clash of Allison and Van Ryn against Gregory and Collins, wherein the Englishmen started in whirlwind fashion and took the first set at 6-4. Then the pairs that fought out the final last year went at it hammer and tongs in a smashing, racing, spectacular exhibition of tennis acrobatics. Gregory's play in the first set was too brilliant to last and the American titleholders came back steadily to win.

Griffin Playoff Is Won by Ridley

GRIFFIN, Ga., July 4.—Seaton Bailey, of Griffin, and Frank Ridley, of LaGrange, tied with 75 each for medal honors in the eighth annual Griffin Country Club invitation golf tournament today. Ridley won in the play-off. There were eight flights of eight players each who qualified out of more than 100 starters. LaGrange won the team trophy with 329.

In the semi-final matches of the championship flight, which will be played Saturday morning, Seaton Bailey plays C. H. Thompson, of Cartersville, and M. C. Livingstone, of Atlanta, plays Frank Ridley, of LaGrange. The finals will be played Saturday afternoon.

Sweeping the Clouds Away

George Herman (Babe) Ruth, the Great Man, is far out ahead of his home-run schedule. If he keeps going, as he seems to be bent on doing, he will set a record far in excess of 60, the present mark. Poor old Babe, the critics were almost unanimous in reading him out this year and all he does is go after a new record. He sweeps the clouds away most every day.

Ball Nibbles Carrots, Visiting Clubs Revolt

By Frank Getty,
United News Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, July 4.—(UN)—It seems that some of the visiting clubs are voicing suspicion of a lively ball allegedly introduced recently at Shibe park by the world's champion Athletics.

They tell of one such "rabbit ball," hit over the fence in Philadelphia, hopping up into a huckster's cart and nibbling at a carrot.

BASEBALL NOT ALONE.

Baseball, however, is far from the only sport in which the ball has been adulterated to cause it to fly farther and even make left-hand turns against the lights.

Among golf manufacturers there is a secret, gentleman's agreement gradually to increase the flight of the golf ball each season by doctoring up its insides. This process has nothing to do with the size and weight of the ball, but with tightening up the tension in the interior.

One prominent manufacturer recently told me that his concern—and others—could immediately add 25 per cent to the distance of any drive. A tee shot which carries 200 yards with the present golf ball could be lengthened to 250 yards. Something no ordinary golfer would complain about.

If one manufacturer put such a ball on the market he would capture the custom of nearly all the devotees of the royal and ancient pastime. But because if one maker put all he had on the ball at once the others would be bound to follow suit there is a gentleman's agreement to do the thing gradually and keep the customers buying new supplies year after year.

AND EVEN TENNIS.

The comparatively polite pastime of tennis some time ago was thrown into indignant turmoil by introduction of the slotted ball.

When struck by chop-stroke players this ball would either nestle into the ground somewhat like a sparrow taking a dust bath, or occasionally hop right back over the net. When sliced with strong back spin the slotted ball has been known to climb right up the umpire's chair, rung by rung.

When its peculiarities were discovered the slotted ball was stamped out with all the vehemence of a young housewife going after her first ant.

FOOTBALL FREE? NO!

One would imagine football would be one game in which the ball would be free from adulteration. Yet such is not the case. Last fall one college numbered among its players an extraordinary able forward passer was caught introducing a ball which resembled a banana rather than the prescribed lemon shape.

When grasped in the hand of the passer this ball could be flung to any corner of the gridiron and even around corners, somewhat after the manner of a boomerang. The plight of kickers on the opposing teams trying to get distance with such a ball was, of course, just too bad.

As far as forward-passing went, however, the full capabilities of this "banana ball" were not fully revealed before its shape was discerned and it was vigorously deflated by eleven indignant young men.

KOOB GOES TO TOPEKA.

TOPEKA, Kan., July 4.—(AP)—Ernie Koob, veteran portside hurler, formerly with Louisville of the American association, has been signed by the Topeka Western league club.

Cubs Watch Appling; 'Rosie' Gets Attention

Pat Flaherty, scout of the Chicago Cubs, was a spectator at the Cracker games Friday. He was peering intently at Luke Appling, the apple of your eye.

The New York Yankee scout, who is also interested in Appling, is expected early next week.

Captain William Neal, of Louisville, was also a visitor. Captain Neal likes Rosenthal. He is one of the league's best outfielders and is also being considered by major league scouts.

CLUB REACHES .500 PERCENTAGE FOR FIRST TIME

Late Rallies Win Both Games as Bears Fight Stubbornly.

Lookouts Play At Spiller's Today

Mobile's Uphfters departed Friday night after having lifted the Crackers to a .500 percentage and the Chattanooga Lookouts take their places here in a single game today, play to begin at 2:30 o'clock. The Crackers go on the road tonight for three games, returning home on Wednesday. The nine games just completed with the Bears, in which Atlanta won eight out of nine, saw the club climb to a threatening position in the race.

By Ralph McGill.

Independence Day was celebrated in a big way by the Atlanta Crackers at Spiller field. They shook off the shackles of an adverse average and advanced to a .500 percentage for the first time this season by beating the Bears twice, the scores being 14 to 10 and 8 to 7.

Cracker pitchers had little to offer and the Bears took advantage of their semi-collapse to put up a stubborn fight. The Bears simply go up there and try for their base hits and they get quite a few if the pitchers aren't bearing down.

The Crackers are technically in the first division this morning as Chattanooga and Birmingham are tied for third place. This afternoon's game is one of those crucial ones with the Lookouts and the Crackers fighting it out to see who shall stick in there.

LOTS OF ACTION.

Friday's games were rather prolific in runs, hits and players. Forty-two players performed in the two games. They scored 33 runs and made 59 hits. Fans saw plenty of action.

RALLIES WON.

Late rallies won both games for the Crackers. In the morning game Nick Dumovich and Chet Howard wasted a six-run lead and permitted the Bears to go ahead 10 and 8 for the time.

MUNICIPAL LINKS TOP ALL OTHERS IN ATTENDANCE

By Roy White.

What is believed to be a record for Atlanta golf courses was established Friday when it was reported that 2,850 golfers played on a dozen private and municipal courses from sun up until the shades of darkness called a halt.

Piedmont park, John A. White, Stockade and Candler Park, all municipal courses, reported the largest number of players. The city courses were crowded from shortly after daybreak until dark and many times there were a dozen foursomes waiting on the various tees for a group ahead to move on.

Although the official count had not been made at the city courses it was estimated at 1,700, almost as many as played in the entire city one year ago on the same day when Bobby Jones shot a 66 at East Lake in practice for the 1929 national open tournament.

East Lake Country Club, with two courses, led the private clubs in the number of players. Frank Ball, club professional, who did not have a spare minute during the entire day, stated that 250 players used the two courses.

Druid Hills with 175 players was second in the private clubs. Capital City reported 160 players. Black Rock, a semi-private club, reported 200 players throughout the day.

Five flag tournaments were run during the afternoon. East Lake, Druid Hills, Capital, Ansley Park and Ingleside players planted their flags at various points on the courses.

Other players who did not participate in the tournaments spent a busy day polishing up their games. They are getting ready for the annual Georgia state amateur tournament which will be played next week on the East Lake course.

James L. Key	450
John A. White	425
Candler Park	350
East Lake	250
Black Rock	200
Druid Hills	175
Capital City	160
Forrest Hills	150
Ansley Park	125
West End	50
Ingleside	40

Ansley Golfers Prove Good Flagmen.

Ansley Park golfers played consistently and accurately Friday to place their flags in the cups when the allotted number of handicap strokes plus par for the course had given out. The annual flag tournament was divided into three classes according to handicaps.

Dan Smith was medalist for the day with a 75 and won Class A trophy when his flag was placed in the 19th cup. Johnny Green won second prize by sinking a long putt on the 18th green, and J. A. Duncan found the 17th cup on his last attempt for third place.

In Class B, J. J. Merritt won first prize. He was in the 19th cup when his handicap strokes ran out. E. B. Taylor and M. L. Shropshire all reached the 18th cup to share second, third and fourth honors.

In Class C, M. D. Larned was a few inches from the 19th cup for first prize. R. M. R. Bardwell, Jr., was over the ditch on the 19th fairway for second honor and H. L. Barnitz reached the 18th green to take third place.

Armstrong, of Atlanta, Wins at Savannah.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 4.—(AP)—D. A. Armstrong, Atlanta, won the tri-city golf tournament staged this morning at the municipal golf course among employes of Crane Company from Atlanta, Macon and Savannah with a net score of 73. J. A. McMurray, Atlanta, was runner-up with a score of 74.

A. H. Lee, Macon, won the putting contest, with H. H. Gardner, Atlanta, second, while in the ladies' putting contest Mrs. A. J. Smith, Savannah, was winner, and Miss Egan, Savannah, runner-up. Fifty-five delegates from Atlanta and a number from Macon left tonight for their homes. Others remain over through Sunday.

Druid Hills golfers were divided into two classes Friday for the annual flag day tournament. Players with handicaps under 18 were placed in Class A and 19 and over played in Class B.

Jesse Draper won Class A trophy when he was short of the 20th green on his last attempt. Dr. LeRoy Childs was next with his flag in the 19th cup and J. Horacek was third, just short of the 19th green.

Class B honor was won by R. W. Harven. He drove off the 21st green on his last stroke. F. P. Smith was second when his last attempt was short of the 20th green and A. C. Bromgerg's ball was a few inches outside of Smith's for third place.

Woodside Wins Flag Tournament.

J. J. Woodside captured first honors at Capital City Club when he with the aid of a number of handicap strokes planted his flag in the 19th cup. No other player was able to overtake him.

Second honor at Capital City was won by Sam Mangham, who drove off the 19th tee on his last handicap stroke added to par. Ivor Kenway won third place as his last attempt landed only a few inches from the 18th cup.

It was a day for newcomers in the limelight at Capital City. None of the veteran players, due to small handicap strokes, were able to outplay the "dark horses."

Morris Is Victor At East Lake.

J. L. Morris with a 72 net won first honor Friday in an annual Fourth of July flag golf tournament played on the East Lake course. Morris had a gross of 92, but 20 handicap strokes made him low.

Keith Conway and Bill Franklin divided second and third honors with nets of 73 each. Conway had a gross of 85 and Franklin's gross was 86.

Beresford Wins At Capital City.

Beresford and Cooper played 18 holes early in the week and ended all square and decided to play another 18 Thursday to settle the issue.

Rembert Wins Over Griffin.

John Rembert defeated A. P. Griffin in a third round match of the Forrest Hills golf tournament. Other players at Forrest Hills had a busy practice afternoon in preparation for the remaining third and fourth round matches in four flights in the club tournament.

West End Club To Hold Tourney.

Albert Jones, professional at West End, announced that a flag tournament will be played at West End this afternoon. It was postponed from Friday, due to a large number of members being out of the city.

Ingleside Tourney Won by Schoen.

G. H. Schoen won the annual flag tournament staged Friday on the Ingleside Country Club course. Schoen was in the 19th fairway when his handicap strokes gave out.

Davis Scores 70 At Piedmont.

SENATORS SWEEP DAY.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Washington advanced on Philadelphia today while shoving the New York Yankees down two games, 8 to 0 and 7 to 3.

DIVIDE TWIN BILL.

CHICAGO, July 4.—Tommy Thomas came back after a long period of ineffectiveness today and gave the White Sox an even break with the St. Louis Browns in the Independence Day double header.

The White Sox dropped the opener, 7 to 0, when the Browns hammered Ted Lyons and young Ed Walsh, but Thomas cinched the second with a four-hit pitching performance, 6 to 4. The Sox made six errors behind him but Johnny Kerr and Carl Reynolds saved the issue with home runs.

Gregory Mulleavy, star shortstop obtained by the White Sox from Toledo, made his debut and got three hits, driving in three runs. He fielded prfectly in the first game but made two bobbles in the nightcap.

BOSTON, July 4.—The league-leading Athletics broke even in a double-header here today with the Red Sox. A holiday gathering of 30,000 saw the Sox take the first game, 7 to 6, and the A's the second, 4 to 2.

Rommel held the Bostonians to six hits in the second game and the visitors scored all their runs off Lisenbee in the seventh. McNair's single and Bishop's double followed two passes and a hit batter.

Crackers Win Pair From Mobile Here

arm out there in the morning's heat to halt the Bear hitters. They are a curious lot of players that Jimmy Hamilton has. He has picked them up here and there, castoffs from almost every league. They can win about one game out of every eight or nine played but they have a dangerous stubbornness.

They try no inside baseball. They are just up there taking their cuts and they pounce on any pitcher that weakens.

LATE RALLIES.

The Crackers had to come from behind to win the first game. They did it handily, scoring five runs in the final two innings they were up to win by a four-run margin.

In the afternoon game Climax Blethen allowed no runs and but two hits across six innings only to blow up in the seventh. The Crackers, while he was halting the Bears, had hammered out seven runs in six innings and things looked reasonably safe.

In the seventh Blethen let down and those wild, free-swinging Bears starting hitting that ball hard and often. Five runs came clattering in before the perspiring Climax could retire the side.

The eighth saw them going at it again and one run came over before Ray Francis stopped them.

DARK OUTLOOK.

In the ninth Sullivan, the Bear catcher, came up as a pinch hitter and poled a home run into the leftfield stands to tie the score at seven-all.

Things looked very dark indeed in the ninth, when Sam Langford struck out. But Jack Sheehan, the smart hitter that he is, waited out the veteran Black and got a base on balls. He went to second on an infield out and tallied on Roy Carlyle's steamy blow to center.

REMARKABLE RECORD.

The record of the club for the past 30 days is a remarkable one. They have played near .700 baseball and climbed from a poor seventh place to a good spot in the race.

The club is badly in need of pitchers, but otherwise seems well balanced. The infield may have a shift next week, when Red Barron is expected to return to the line-up. His eye is still giving him some trouble, but he has been working out and expects to be ready when the club returns home Wednesday.

Bob Lamotte, Cracker third-baseman, was hit by a pitched ball in the morning game Friday and was forced to quit the afternoon contest in the first inning.

Johnny Chapman, the sterling Mobile third baseman, was hurt in the afternoon game and forced out of the lineup for a day or so.

PETERSON WINS AT LAKEWOOD

Fifteen thousand fans saw Swan Peterson race to his second successive victory in the Dixie Motor Derby at Lakewood park Friday afternoon, and "Wild Junie" Bracken, Birmingham, the new southern mile-track champion, beat out Crash Waller, of Blakely, Ga., the titleholder since last July Fourth.

Peterson won the Class A race for heavy motored cars to start the afternoon right. He won his heat of the Dixie Derby and the finals of the derby. Bracken won the southern championship and a heat of the derby. Bell finished second in the derby, Bracken third and Fitzgerald fourth.

In a special match race with Roy Bell, Sig Haugdahl broke a piston on the last lap and the doughty Norwegian was defeated by his fellow-citizen. Sig says the Miller will be running today and boasts he will "clean up" on the field.

Father Lumpkin, ex-football player, proved the "star" of the dock-dive, for Mysterious Ellsworth, originally slated for the stunt, did a walkout and Lumpkin, who made no pretense as a blindfold driver, and only offered to go as a passenger in the car, elected to drive the auto in the lake down an incline platform.

Introduction of cars and drivers, 2:30 p. m.

Second heat, Southland Grand Prix.

Dock-dive, Walter Brown and Father Lumpkin.

Finals Southland Grand Prix.

Class A race, three miles, Peterson winner; Bracken, second; Waller, third. Time, 2:59 4-5.

Fourth annual southern mile-track championship; Bracken, winner; Waller, second; Sam Santoro, third. Three miles. Time, 3:06 1-5.

Second heat, derby: Peterson, winner; Bell, second; Argoe, third. Three miles. Time, 3:00 4-5.

STAPP WINNER AT SPEEDWAY

Driving at terrific pace, Babe Stapp, captain of the 1930 Duesenberg racing team, stole the spotlight in the races Friday afternoon on the Atlanta speedway on Pace's Ferry road. The races were about the best that have been run on the half-mile speedway this year.

A miss-and-out race was won by Stapp after 14 laps around the track. Every time a driver was passed he was eliminated, and it required seven miles for Stapp to pass all other drivers. They were started at various intervals and at different positions on the track.

In the 25-mile feature event of the afternoon Stapp was hard pressed in the first few miles, but he soon forged into a comfortable lead, which he held throughout. His time was 18 minutes 45.6 seconds.

Britons 12 Hours In Outboard Motor

PORTSMOUTH, England, July 4. That outboard motors have plenty of endurance in addition to speed was proven here recently when two youths drove a service motor over a six-mile course for 12 hours with but 18 minutes lost in refueling. Their average speed for the 12-hour run was 30.3 miles per hour. The tiny power plants are growing in popularity with remarkable rapidity in the British Isles.

ROBINS STILL LEAD.

NEW YORK, July 4.—The Brooklyn Robins clung to their precarious hold on first place in the National league today by winning the afternoon game of a double-header, 5 to 2, after the Giants had taken the morning contest, 5 to 4, in an 11-inning struggle. The Chicago Cubs also got an even break.

William Watson Clark, of Brooklyn, held the Giants to six hits in the second game, one of which was a home run by Lindstrom. The Robins made some timely hits off Bill Walker, getting two runs on a single hit on two occasions. Finn's homer, following a walk, turned the trick the second time.

The Giants scored four runs in the seventh, eighth and ninth inning of the opener to tie the score. Dazzy Vance pitched the entire contest, giving 11 hits. Herman, Gilbert and Hogan hit homers in the morning.

CARDS WIN PAIR.

ST. LOUIS, July 4.—The Cardinals won both ends of a double header from the Cincinnati Reds here today. In the opening game the Cardinals hit hard behind Flint Rhem's rather effective pitching and won, 15 to 4, while in the second, Syl Johnson hurled brilliantly until the ninth inning, and the Red Birds triumphed, 6 to 2.

Johnson shut out the visitors until the ninth when Swanson and Kelly hit home runs. Walker hit a homer for the Reds in the opening game.

AMERICAN CREW IN SEMI-FINALS

HENLEY, England, July 4.—(AP)—Kent school of Connecticut eliminated Princeton University's lightweights—only other American crew in the regatta—in a close race over a mile and 550 yards today to enter the semi-finals for the Thames challenge cup, an event open to all amateur eights.

Thus two American boatloads, celebrating their national holiday far from home, drew the chief attention on a day that has no victorious significance, for England at the same time provided a decided threat for the semi-finals tomorrow morning and the finals in the afternoon.

It is generally believed that Kent can defeat Worcester college of Oxford in the semi-final. The American youngsters traveled the course in 7 minutes 27 seconds in defeating Princeton by half a length, while Worcester eliminated Lady Margaret college of Cambridge in 7:29.

Columbia Stages First Triple Play

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 4.—(AP) The Columbia Comers pulled the first triple play of the South Atlantic league season today in the first game of a twin bill with Asheville. The Tourists won the game, 12 to 0.

Sullivan, Tourist centerfielder, was on third; Nash on first, and Breakfield at the bat when the play was started.

Breakfield grounded to Perritt, Comer third-sacker, who flipped the ball to Skube, shortstop, catching Nash at second. Skube shot the ball to Stebbins at first, getting Breakfield, and Stebbins heaved to Finney at home plate to nab Sullivan as he came dashing from third.

REESE, BOYNTON CLASH TODAY IN SEMI-FINALS

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 4.—(AP)—The 1930 junior singles championship of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association will fall to lot of either Wilmer Hines, Carolina racquet wizard and defending titleholder; Ed Sutter, of New Orleans, or one of two Georgia youths, Billy Reese and George Boynton.

In the semi-finals tomorrow Hines will meet Sutter and the two Georgians will fight it out for the right to meet the winner of the Hines-Sutter match for the title.

Hines defeated his doubles partner, Judge Beaver, of Gainesville, Ga., in the quarter-finals today 2-6, 6-4, 6-2. His quarter-finals victory rolled up his string of successive tournament match victories to 29. The 29 match wins represented his play in the South Carolina, mid-Atlantic, Cotton States and Tri-States tournaments and the southern junior today.

Sutter, Boynton and Reese defeated Memphis' players in their quarter-finals tests. Sutter won over Jimmy Durham, Memphis, 6-0, 6-1; Boynton defeated Lawrence Norton 6-0, 6-0, and Reese eliminated Cecil Metz 7-5, 6-3.

Paul Fitts, Martin, Tenn., and Ross Cheshire, Atlanta, were among the players who lost their chance in the third round. Fitts was beaten by Beavers and Cheshire lost to Hines.

In the boys' singles the semi-finals matches will be between John Graber, Yazoo City, Miss., and Rex Godwin, Anniston, Ala., and Joe Greer, Charlotte, N. C., and George Boynton.

Godwin and Greer also played through today to the finals in boys' doubles, defeating Graber and Jack Noblin, of Jackson, Miss., in the semi-finals 6-0, 7-5. Other matches tomorrow will decide their opponents in the finals.

Thompson Beaten By Young Corbett

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—(UN)—Winning six of the 10 rounds by a wide margin, Young Corbett III, Fresno welterweight, decisively defeated Jack Thompson, negro titleholder, at the Ewing baseball park here today.

It was a one-sided fight all the way with Corbett demonstrating his mastery over Thompson from the first to the final bell.

The United News gave Corbett six rounds, called three even and gave one round to Thompson.

COURAGE SAVED ATLANTA STAR IN GREAT FIGHT

British Expert Pays Tribute to King of Golfdom for Victory.

By Bernard Darwin,
British Golf Expert.

LONDON, England, July 4.—The greatest compliment I can think of paying Bobby Jones, in addition to those now being showered upon him on his arrival home, is this—that he has won three of our open championships and he won two of the three without being really at his best.

St. Andrews, where he won three years ago, was the exception; then he was supremely good, but both at St. Anne's and most recently at Hoylake he had all the time to wrestle with a certain lack of confidence in himself and his clubs.

Bobby is apt to exaggerate his defects and he would probably say that he never knew where the ball was going. That is a picturesque overstatement, but I do not believe he ever felt what he calls "right." He was all the time a little apprehensive, and for that reason I doubt whether any of his victories took it out of him as prodigally as the one at Hoylake.

BOB'S COURAGE.

His courage pulled him through, and even more than his courage, his putting. The rest of his game was so beautiful that at first the spectators were apt not to notice his putting. This time the fact that he was making more mistakes than usual threw the excellence of his work on the greens in bold relief, and nobody could fail to notice it. For my part I think it is this putting of his which accounts for the amazing consistency of his record of victories.

Most of the outstanding golfers in this country, to whom may be properly applied the epithet great, have not been outstandingly good putters. Harry Vardon was in his youth an average good putter and later a tragically bad one. Taylor was a steady one, but no more. Braid made himself in his best years a good one, but he had terrible lapses. John Ball was sometimes good and sometimes horrid.

But there have been two really fine putters who have won our open championship, and these two are Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones. It is Bobby's putting that has put the coping stone on his greatness and made him the nearly invincible player he is.

BELIEVED IN BOB.

Personally I always from the first shot at Hoylake thought he would win, and I did not waver even though in his first three rounds he hung a millstone round his neck by his obvious terror of the first three holes. He always recovered at the fourth and reeled off par after par till one grew dizzy in the watching.

When I did have too little faith was in the last round of all, when he had vanquished the hoodoo of those first three holes and was all going smilingly until he took that preposterous seven at the eighth hole by Lurling away shots within 30 and 20 and 10 yards of the hole.

I did think then that he was "mad" with himself, and that he might break even a little. He did not, but it was a near thing, and I never admired a man more than I did Bobby for buckling to again so nobly after almost throwing the championship into the gutter.

POPULAR WINNER.

I sometimes wonder whether Bobby will ever come to play in our championships again. The agony is too great, and what more can he do to make higher his pinnacle? If he ever does he will at least have finished in style and he can say to himself that there has never been a more popular winner.

Diegel was a fine performer at Hoylake, but he had, like Bobby, to struggle with a lack of confidence in his long game. The way for Diegel to win, it strikes me, is to win easily, but I cannot quite see him winning this open championship if he has a very close call of it over the last few holes.

Perhaps I am wrong, and I hope I am wrong, for he would be a popular winner, if not another Bobby.

Alfonso Rides Yacht To Second in Race

BEMBRIDGE, Isle of Wight, July 4.—(AP)—King Alfonso of Spain, aboard his yacht Hispania, gained second place in the eight-meter international class at today's concluding events of the Bembridge Sailing Club regatta.

Susette won the event in 2:38:46.

Belgian Champion Takes Chess Title

SCARBOROUGH, England, July 4.—(AP)—Edgard Colle, champion of Belgium, today won the international tournament of the British Chess Federation by drawing the last game with A. Rubenstein, of Poland, in the eleventh round and finishing with a total score of 8 1-2-2 1-2.

The victor came through without the loss of a game, having won six games and drawn five.

Hawaiian Shines In Swim Victory

LONG BEACH, Cal., July 4.—(AP)—Maiola Kalili, native Hawaiian, furnished the fireworks in preliminaries of the National A. A. U. swimming meet today by winning the 440-yard freestyle in 5 minutes 5 2-10 seconds, to prove a threat to Clarence Crabbe, title holder, in the finals.

Crabbe, Honolulu's contribution to the Los Angeles A. C. team, won the second heat in 5 minutes 14 2-10 seconds, and Albert Zorilla, of the New York A. C., won the third heat in 5 minutes 24 seconds.

TWO BOSSES.

Bossing the smallest minor league takes two men. The Nebraska State circuit has two presidents. James E. Seltzer returned from a hospital to find J. R. Carter in his chair. Both claim the job.

CHICKS, PEBS SPLIT.

MEMPHIS, July 4.—Honors were even when Memphis and Little Rock finished their holiday double-header today. Memphis won the first game, 9 to 1, by pounding two Traveler pitchers for a total of fifteen hits and Little Rock retaliated in the second, 4 to 0, due to the tight pitching of Moon and the ability of his teammates to bunch hits in two innings off Walker.

McDaniel, Memphis infielder, batted 1.000 in the first game—three hits, including a double and triple in three times at bat.

CYRIL TOLLEY 'PULLS' FOR BILL AT WIMBLEDON

Veteran Golfer Was Not Surprised at Allison's Victory.

By Brian Bell,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Cyril J. H. Tolley, former British amateur golf champion, turned from his favorite sport to talk of his second love—tennis—before he left New York for Minneapolis to compete in the open golf championship.

Mr. Tolley speaks with authority of tennis as well as golf, for he is a first-class player and frequently has acted as an official.

"Henri Cochet did not seem quite fit when I saw him play Berkeley Bell at Wimbledon," said Tolley. "I was not so surprised when I learned Wilmer Allison beat him.

"I was much more impressed by the play of Jean Borotra than that of Cochet, but neither will ever be the player Rene Lacoste was. He was a tennis machine.

"The play of Borotra is fascinating to watch. He is more than ever the bounding Basque. He leaps all over the court in a somewhat weird but nevertheless effective way. It gets results and certainly it adds a great deal of color to his game."

"He seems to be playing as well as he ever did. If he wins the British championship, as I think he will, after a lapse of nearly ten years, it certainly will be a remarkable development.

"I am all for Bill, of course, for we veterans must lend each other a hand."

Tilden, however, is more entitled to the designation of "veteran" than Tolley, for he is 34 years old, while Tilden has passed 37.

Southeastern League

SELMA, Ala., July 4.—Joe Longnecker's fluke triple to right that scored two runs gave Selma a 4-to-3 victory in the afternoon game of a double-header with Pensacola here today in the 11th inning. The victory made it two for Selma for the holiday as the Leafs won the morning game, 8-0.

"Slim" Brewer got credit for both victories as he blanked the Fliers in the morning game and relieved Bill Gould with the score tied at one-all in the nightcap. It made 17 victories against 3 losses for Brewer.

LIONS, FOXES SHARE.

COLUMBUS, Ga., July 4.—Columbus broke a 3-all deadlock with Montgomery in the ninth inning and won the afternoon game of the Fourth of July bill here today, 4 to 3.

Battle's two-base hit after two were out was turned into the winning marker when Lion players faltered afield, making two costly errors.

'Fox' Heads West In Quest of Laurels

The speedy thoroughbred, riding in a de luxe express car, was en route to Arlington Park where he will compete in the $80,000 added American classic, July 12. Handlers of the Preakness, Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner said he was in excellent condition.

There is a wise old saying that the team setting the pace on the Fourth of July will flash under the wire ahead in most any baseball pennant race.

If such be the case, the Memphis Chickasaws can be counted "in" as the victors of this year's Southern Association flag chase. Doc Prothro's Chicks drew away from the pack before the season was out of its swaddling clothes and have been aperch the top rung ever since.

The old adage proved true last year as the Birmingham Barons, leading the league on Independence Day, crossed the finish line first. However, the Barons won by the slimmest of margins as the Nashville Volunteers—more than 100 points behind and tied for third place on the holiday—set the league afire with a closing burst of speed and were right on the Chicks' heels at the tape.

The Vols are down in the mire now, but the peppery manager, Pants Rowland, expects them to show some drive down the stretch during the remaining weeks.

The Vol boss insists his troopers are still in the pennant race. "We have about 47 home games out of those 70-odd remaining on the schedule," Rowland says. "That's a big item in our favor. We can win at home and we should pick up lots of slack. The thing for us to do is to forget our bad baseball and start all over again. We are no worse off than we were a year ago."

With the exception of Chattanooga taking Nashville's place, the upper quartet now shows the same teams as a year ago—Memphis, New Orleans and Birmingham. Memphis has a little better percentage of victories now than Birmingham had at this stage of the 1929 season.

Memphis led the Southern squads as they passed the half way mark, while Greenville has already won the initial portion of the South Atlantic circuit schedule, and Selma can coast to victory in the opening half of the Southeastern league.

Tennessee gridiron fans are setting fire to their football bon fires early. Last Wednesday night scores of Chattanooga enthusiasts entertained Major Robert P. Neyland, of the University of Tennessee, at a banquet and the remarks tossed across the table carried promise of another great season at the Knoxville school.

Wilbur Shaw Wins 100-Mile Auto Race

BRIDGEVILLE, Pa., July 4.—(AP)—Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, won the 100-mile A. A. A. championship race at the Pittsburgh-Bridgeville speedway today. His time was 1 hour 29 minutes 57 2-5 seconds. Russell Snowberger, Philadelphia, was second, two laps behind the winner, and Burt Karnatz, Detroit, was third. Dave Evans, Evansville, Ind., was fourth.

Billy Arnold, winner at Indianapolis and Altoona, who entered today's race in an attempt to clinch this year's racing championship, was 13 laps behind when Shaw reached the century mark. Several accidents kept the Chicago pilot from taking a place with the leaders. The winner took $1,500, second place $800 and third $600.

Sheridan To Leave Auburn Coach Job

AUBURN, Ala., July 4.—(AP)—Fred L. Sheridan, varsity baseball coach at Alabama Polytechnic Institute during the past season, has signed a contract to teach and coach athletics at Dora High school in Alabama for the 1930-31 term.

Sheridan's successor at Auburn has not been named.

Pelicans Purchase Pitcher From Selma

SELMA, Ala., July 4.—(AP)—Sale of Steve Ellis, right-handed pitcher, to New Orleans of the Southern association was announced today by officials of the Selma club of the Southeastern league.

Ellis will report immediately for a 30-day trial. The sale price was not announced.

Who Wins at Interlachen?

No. 2. The Foreign Born—Foreign born golfers from England and Scotland have been much larger factors in U. S. open championships than the golfing multitude might first imagine. In fact they have churned up a fair amount of froth. Jim Barnes won in 1921. Bobby Cruickshank tied Jones in 1923. Cyril Walker won in 1924. Willie MacFarlane arrived in 1925. Tommy Armour and Harry Cooper tied in 1927 with Armour winning.

The foreign born delegation will be as strong as ever on this next occasion. Here are a few reasons.

Armour has the greatest pair of hands in golf. He can whip a long iron on a straighter line than anyone I ever saw. At Winged Foot last summer he used a No. 1 iron coming to the 535-yard fifth green and from well over 200 yards away his furthest ball away from the cup was only a distance of three yards and two of them were almost stone dead. That sounds more like rifle firing. With Armour it will be a case of putting his putter to work. If he can do that he will be tough for anyone to take. Armour has the golf to be a vital factor.

MacDonald Smith—Here is a veteran who tied for the U. S. open just 20 years ago and only two weeks ago finished just two strokes back of Bobby Jones at Hoylake. That is how well the silent Scot has held his game together. Mac Smith has won enough big tournaments to stock a barn but the major titles have just missed him. He is one of the old-fashioned swingers with every club, not a slugger or hitter in any sense. He uses a driver that weighs 15½ ounces and simply swings it through, letting the club head carry a big part of the job. If Mac Smith can last out this may be his time. But it gets just a little harder every year.

Jim Barnes—Long Jim won nine years ago and only two weeks ago was still among the leaders at Hoylake. He is a fine golfer with a sound style and if he can lay hold of his putting touch as he did at Columbia in 1921 he will be something to watch. Barnes carries a good head on top of his tall shoulders and this is no light help in an open test. Barnes' play at Hoylake should bring him encouragement at Interlachen.

Harry Cooper—A slashing young player who made his best bid at Oakmont three years ago. He has gained his share of experience since and is one of those golfers who can travel in a hurry when he happens to get away to a good start.

Wilmer and Will.

A few months ago the U. S. tennis world had about pinned its faith upon George Lott as the most promising of the younger tennis stars with Johnny Doeg put in second place.

But Wilmer Allison, of Texas, upset the dope at Wimbledon. He had a tough sector to fight through and his showing was remarkable. He is now two years younger than Tilden was when Big Bill started his championship run in 1920.

Tilden's march into the final round at Wimbledon proved again the amazing stamina his long, tall, lanky system must carry. Thirty-seven isn't so old, but it isn't so young for championship tennis. Yet Tilden has been bounding from one hard campaign into another ever since last winter. He has had almost no rest from one of the most strenuous of all the competitive sports.

His invasions have embraced four or five nations and he has made no effort to get any rest from competition anywhere along the line.

Big Bill is undoubtedly one of the athletic marvels of the age—this age or any other. His stamina is almost beyond belief. Any number of strong younger players would have been deadly stale before Wimbledon's show was half over.

The smart fighter of the future will meet the new foul rule by procuring a steel guard studded with sharp spikes and he will break the news gently to his opponent before the bell rings. There may be more effective ways of keeping punches out of the danger zone, but I can't think of any at the moment.

SMALL CROWD GREETS MAXIE AS COPS LOAF

New Champ and Mother Fly to Berlin From Bremenhaven.

BERLIN, July 4.—(AP)—A small crowd saw Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion, come down out of the clouds today with the laurels he won in America from Jack Sharkey on a foul.

The fans waiting inside the Tempelhof airport as the low-wing monoplane bearing the titleholder and his mother from Bremerhaven could have been squeezed into a hangar and the crowd outside the fence did not endanger the railings.

A small army of police detailed to the airport to control the expected throng had nothing to do. Schmeling was cordially "hoched," however. Before leaving he received a belt, gift of the Union of German Boxers, and spoke into a radio microphone.

"I am glad to get back to Berlin," he said. "I am thankful for the confidence the people have in me and hope I will always be worthy of it."

Crowds Welcome Max on Arrival.

BREMERHAVEN, Germany, July 4.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, German boxer, was welcomed enthusiastically by friends and admirers when he landed here today from the Bremen, which brought him from New York.

He exchanged affectionate embraces with his mother on the quay. He left almost immediately for Berlin by airplane.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 4.—(AP)—While members of the National Education Association celebrated the anniversary of American independence today, John F. Finley, literary editor of the New York Times, called upon them to recognize that destiny is fast increasing interdependence among nations.

Finley spoke at the closing session of the association's 68th annual convention. The new president, Dr. Willis A. Sutton, of Atlanta, Ga., was installed at this session and Los Angeles was selected as the 1931 meeting place.

The speaker declared that our boundaries are becoming so vast in the sense of interdependence that the Angel Gabriel on judgment day might well be able to discard his trumpet for the radio, which at that time will reach every human being at the selfsame moment, Boston to Bombay and back again.

"On this day of independence," said Finley, "I would repeat in peace the word which was on our lips in war, interdependence—to make and keep the whole world, and not patches of it here and there, a fit place to which we may conscientiously invite children to come and go to school.

"Self-determination is a brave word, but it would be an ignoble word if it thought only of self. Interdependence is the law of the universe from the atoms to the stars. Our supreme national achievement has been the demonstration of the practicability of federation on a large scale," he said. He quoted John Fisk as prophecying 50 years ago that it would become desirable at the end of a century for the states of Europe to enter into a federal union.

"We are only a half century on the way from the time when that prophecy was made. Europe is already astir with that vision," Finley said.

In agriculture, in minerology, in aestheticism and in culture the law of interdependence is demonstrating itself, he said.

CHURCH GROUP BACKS APPORTIONING CHANGE

Methodists Would Grant Representation on Citizenship.

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N. C., July 4.—(AP)—The board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, today voted approval of the Stalker resolution introduced in congress and providing for an amendment to the Constitution to make citizenship rather than population the basis of congressional representation.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., president of the board which is meeting here, expressed belief such an amendment would be helpful to prohibition "by eliminating an element unfriendly to prohibition."

The resolution said in part:

"In view of the fact that under the new apportionment several states will suffer the loss of members of congress which losses are principally in dry states and since the states with the large wet alien-dominated cities now have approximately 30 congressmen, 30 electoral votes and 60 delegates to the national nominating conventions who represent not American citizens but seven and one-half million unnaturalized aliens, we heartily approve the Stalker resolution providing for an amendment to the Constitution of the United States which will eliminate all unnaturalized aliens in the enumeration of population to determine congressional or electoral representation, thus placing control of the government of the country in the hands of its own citizens."

The board also recommended that the boards of temperance and social service of the various Methodist conferences, divisional units of the church, arrange for "an impressive meeting on the question of observance, enforcement and maintenance of prohibition laws."

These should be held, the recommendation said, in order "to combat propaganda of the metropolitan press and increasing antagonism by supporters of the liquor traffic against the 18th amendment."

BUTTERMILK SHOP NOW SERVES FOOD

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—The Salvation Army's buttermilk shop on the Bowery, which sells its product for 2 cents a glass, now also serves a free lunch.

The shop was established to compete with the "smoke" shops of the East Side, bad liquor from which has taken a heavy toll of lives along the street of lost hopes.

GEO. GORDON TO WED WASHINGTON WOMAN

PARIS, July 4.—(AP)—European diplomatic circles were interested today in the announcement that George Anderson Gordon, of New York, counsellor of the American embassy in Berlin, will be married to Mrs. Alice Vandergrift Garrett, prominent in Washington society, at Dublin Monday.

The marriage will be held at the American legation in Dublin. Frederick A. Sterling, American minister to the Irish Free State, is a friend of the couple.

Mr. Gordon is a former army officer. He saw service on the Mexican border in 1916, served in the American expeditionary force during the World War and later entered the diplomatic service. He was a member of the American delegation to the three-power naval conference at Geneva and to the recent London naval conference. He was recently sent to Berlin from the American embassy in Paris.

The Story of the World War —The 3rd Division Counter-Attacks.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

THE 3RD AMERICAN DIVISION HAD NO SOONER REPULSED THE ATTACK OF THE GERMANS ON THE SOUTH BANK OF THE MARNE (JULY 15, 1918) THAN THE DIVISION COMMANDER, GENERAL DICKMAN, AGAINST THE ADVICE OF THE FRENCH, ORDERED HIS MEN TO COUNTER-ATTACK.

SOME OF THE INFANTRY COMPANIES HAD LOST MORE THAN HALF THEIR MEN, BUT THE "DOUGHBOYS" WENT OVER THE TOP WITH GREAT DASH AND SAVAGELY FELL UPON THE GERMAN TROOPS MAROONED ON THE SOUTH BANK.

WITHOUT MEANS OF RECROSSING THE RIVER TO THEIR OWN LINES (MOST OF THEIR CANVAS BOATS HAVING BEEN SUNK), THE STRANDED GERMANS WERE EITHER BAYONETTED OR CAPTURED TO THE LAST MAN.

BY NOON OF THE FOLLOWING DAY (JULY 16), SO GENERAL DICKMAN REPORTED, "THERE WERE NO GERMANS IN THE FOREGROUND OF THE THIRD DIVISION SECTOR EXCEPT THE DEAD." TOMORROW: FOCH'S COUNTER-ATTACK.

Former Fiance of American Weds Aged French Princess

PRINCE DON LUIS TAKES 70-YEAR-OLD BRIDE

PARIS, July 4.—(UN)—The newspaper, Midi, announced today the marriage of Prince Don Luis De Bourbon, former fiance of Mrs. Mabelle Gilman Corey, erstwhile Broadway beauty, to the Princess Amedee De Broglie.

The prince is 41 years old, the princess, 70. She is a member of one of the oldest families of the former French nobility. Don Luis is a cousin of King Alfonso XIII of Spain.

Servants of the princess professed total ignorance of the reported wedding, but refused to deny the marriage. They merely said the princess was absent from Paris.

Mrs. Corey, former wife of William E. Corey, Pittsburgh millionaire, broke with Don Luis of Bourbon just a year ago, following his demands for a financial settlement before their proposed marriage, which she deemed excessive.

She quit her chateau near Versailles, where, like the former kaiser, she chopped wood to preserve her figure, and took up a most luxurious apartment in the Hotel Ritz and began to give the most elaborate of elaborate entertainments.

She has made no plans for the future as regards marriage, it seems, and recently commented to the United News correspondent that she did not intend to wed anyone.

"There's no possibility I shall marry anyone now," she remarked. "I am convinced the name of 'Mrs. Corey' is pretty good, after all."

It was June 24, a year ago, that Mrs. Corey made the definite announcement of her breach with Don Luis of Bourbon. There had been rumors for weeks prior to that, but she always denied them and professed the engagement was a real "love match."

The pride of the Bourbons, however, thought he should have a dowry settlement of some 5,000,000 francs (about $200,000) and an annual income assured of 250,000 francs (about $10,000) together with "pocket money" of around 50,000 francs ($2,000) a year.

The lawyers for the prince and for the former musical comedy star could not agree. She finally got tired of the financial quibbling and ended the affair.

She was married to William Ellis Corey in 1907. He then was president of the United States Steel Corporation. They spent most of their time abroad, and in November, 1924, Mrs. Corey obtained a divorce in Paris.

MELLON MAY ACQUIRE BIG BANKING GROUP

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 4.—Plans for the acquisition of 75 or more banks in western Pennsylvania, in anticipation of moves to legalize branch banking, are understood to have been made by the Mellon and Hilman banking interests here.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette this morning said it had learned the Mellon banking group, the largest in Pittsburgh, seeks to acquire a controlling interest in some 50 banks in western Pennsylvania. The Hillman interests, headed by J. H. Hillman, Jr., are said to be working similarly in banks of Pittsburgh and its immediate vicinity. Though the groups are acting independently, there was said to have been no conflict between them.

An interest already has been acquired by the Mellon group in the Butler County National Bank and Trust Company, Butler, Pa., it was revealed. The Hillman interests in recent months have taken over the First National and Central National banks in Wilkinsburg, Pittsburgh suburb, and the East End Savings and Trust Company here.

Negotiations for the Mellon group are being made by the Mellbank Corporation, formed by the Mellons in 1929 as an investment company. Hillman activities are in the name of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company here, though the Post-Gazette said it understood the Hillman interests planned formation of a new securities company, apart from the Pennsylvania Bankshares and Securities Corporation they now control.

Curtiss Misses First Chance To Close Senate

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—Vice President Curtis missed his first opportunity to adjourn a session of the senate and not one of the "Big Four" republican leaders in the house was present when the gavel banged for adjournment in that chamber last night.

Senator Fess, of Ohio, served as presiding officer of the senate while Vice President Curtis was in New Jersey to make a speech.

The house was in the hands of Michigan members and an Indianian as far as the republicans were concerned, while Representative Garner, of Texas, the minority leader stayed nearly to the end before boarding a train for home.

Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the majority leader, was in his native hills of Tennessee to deliver a Fourth of July speech. Representative Michener, of Michigan, was acting floor leader.

Chairman Snell of the house rules committee is Europe-bound. Representative Purnell, of Indiana, was acting chairman of that important committee which guided the legislation in the last few days of the session.

While Chairman Wood, of the house appropriations committee, was on Chesapeake bay fishing, Representative Cramton, of Michigan, acted as chairman of that group and pressed for the final action on the second deficiency bill, the last legislative act of the session.

Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, the president pro tem of the senate, was away, too.

Jimmy Collins Fails To Beat Lindy's Mark

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., July 4.—(AP)—James H. Collins, former army aviator, landed here at 9:03.30 (EST) tonight, completing a transcontinental flight. He failed to break Colonel Lindbergh's record.

Collins was almost an hour and three-quarters behind the time set by Lindbergh and his wife, the former Anne Morrow, last Easter day. Their record was 14 hours and 45 minutes.

Bodies of Three Men Taken From Lake Erie

ST. THOMAS, Ontario, July 4.—(AP)—Fishermen today found the bodies of two men in their nets when they were drawn in from Lake Erie. Another body was washed ashore along with a wrecked sail boat. The victims were identified as Stanley Winters, 30, of Cleveland, a salesman; Morris Ray Caroll, 30, of Detroit, salesman, and Oscar Layne, 21, of Fairview, Ky., a laborer.

Grant Overton Dies At Long Island Home

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—Grant Overton, formerly literary editor of the New York Sun, died today at his home in Patchogue, L. I. He was in his 43d year.

Mr. Overton, widely known as a newspaperman and author, began his connection with the Sun as a reporter in 1906. Two years later he moved westward, working for brief periods on the Denver Post and San Francisco Examiner. In 1909 he left newspaper work temporarily to sail before the mast on the British ship Wayfarer.

After spending a short time in Scotland, he returned to the Sun, where he remained for 19 years, becoming literary editor in 1916.

A versatile writer, he attracted attention during the last decade as the author of "The Women Who Make Our Novels," "Why Authors Go Wrong," "When Winter Comes to Main Street," and "The Thousand and First Night."

In 1922 he joined the George H. Doran Company and two years later became literary editor of Collier's, a position which he held until his death.

Mendenhall Released On Independence Day

STATE PRISON, RAIFORD, Fla., July 4.—(AP)—Today was in reality a day of freedom for John J. Mendenhall.

Granted a conditional pardon yesterday Mendenhall, who was convicted nearly 15 years ago, planned to leave the state prison farm here today to visit friends and relatives in Florida for a few days and then return to his home in Covington, Ky., where his father and sister are ill.

Mendenhall was convicted for the murder of Miss Sue Elliot, whose body, together with that of her mother, was found in a charred automobile on the Tampa-Clearwater highway after they had gone for a ride with the man. Mendenhall's chauffer, Guy Stempel, who was with the party on the night of the killings, turned state's witness at the trial.

In granting the conditional pardon the pardon board said that Mendenhall's good record and his poor health had been factors in its decision. Mendenhall had been considered a model prisoner and was the most trusted of the trustees at the prison farm. He was allowed unusual freedom at the institution and once was permitted to go to Kentucky to attend his father, who was ill, and once went as far as Chicago and New York.

"If I had been guilty of this horrible crime for which I was convicted on purely circumstantial evidence, I would have taken advantage of the first opportunity to escape," Mendenhall said here. "You know that after the first five months I was here I was made a trusty. Since then I occasionally have been permitted to go about the state on business for the prison and even have gone to New York and Chicago. Oh, I have had plenty of opportunities to escape, but I had nothing to run from," he added.

"I have done a lot of thinking here in prison during the past 14 years, but never a night have I worried about my case. I knew everything would come out all right," Mendenhall said.

"You know in a way I hate to leave here, but I still have lots to live for and I'm going to make the best of it. I have my father and two sisters to care for and I have some business I want to get back into," he continued.

Post Office Robbers Slay Kentuckian

MONTICELLO, Ky., July 4.—(AP) Tom Jones, 53, postmaster at Pueblo, 10 miles east of here, was shot to death and the postoffice robbed of an unknown amount today. The slayers escaped after beating and seriously injuring the postmaster's father, Richard Jones, 81. He was not expected to live.

The slaying and robbery occurred while the postmaster's wife and four children and most of the inhabitants of Pueblo, a small community, were attending a Fourth of July celebration at Monticello. Jones, the proprietor of a combined general store and postoffice at Pueblo, remained behind with his father to take care of his business. No one was near the store at the time of the robbery.

Murders in London Showing Decrease

LONDON, July 4.—(AP)—There were only ten murders of persons more than one year old committed in the London police district in 1929 compared with an average of 22 during the past two years, the annual report of Lord Byng, chief commissioner of the metropolitan police, shows.

While a decline is noted as remarkable, the report points out that the proportion of undiscovered culprits is unusually high, there being four such last year. These include the malefactors in the notorious Sidney poisoning case at Croydon, in which three persons were killed.

Cases of manslaughter were nearly double the number of 1928, with the increase attributed to motoring. Drunkenness showed a substantial decrease, the charges being 23,569, or 2,488 fewer than in 1928. Gambling increased, and there were more arrests than in any year since 1924.

There were 17,664 offenses of all kinds on which indictments were rendered, an increase of 1,778 over the 1928 figure. The total of those killed by automobiles was 1,362, the highest in history.

TARZAN AND THE JEWELS OF OPAR No. 96

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

As Tarzan freed his hands, from the jungle came a low guttural and the ape-man became suddenly a silent, rigid statue, with ears and nostrils straining to span the black void which his eyesight could not reach. Again came the uncanny sound from the thick verdure beyond the camp. A sentry halted abruptly, straining his eyes into the gloom. The kinky wool upon his head stiffened and raised. He called to his comrade in a hoarse whisper, "Did you hear it?" The other came closer, trembling. Again the weird sound was repeated.

Trees overhung the boma on the opposite side from them. They dared not approach nearer. Their terror even prevented them from arousing their fellows—they could only stand in frozen fear and watch for the fearsome apparition they momentarily expected to see leap from the jungle. Nor had they long to wait. A dim, bulky form dropped lightly from the branches of a tree into the camp. At sight of it one of the sentries recovered command of his muscles and his voice. He screamed loudly to awaken the camp and threw a mass of brush on the flickering fire.

The flames leaped high from the rejuvenated fire, lighting the entire camp, and the awakened men shrank back in superstitious terror from the sight that met their frightened vision. A dozen huge and hairy forms loomed large beneath the trees at the far side of the enclosure. The white giant, his hands free, had struggled to his knees and was calling to the frightful, nocturnal visitors in a hideous medley of bestial gutterals, barkings and growlings. Werper had managed to sit up. He, too, saw the savage faces of the approaching anthropoids.

Growling, the great apes leaped forward toward Tarzan and Werper. Chulk led them. The Belgian officer called to his men to fire upon the intruders but the negroes held back, filled as they were with superstitious terror of the hairy treemen, and with the conviction that the white giant who could thus summon the beasts of the jungle to his aid was more than human. Drawing his own weapon the officer fired and Tarzan, fearing the effect of the noise upon his really timid friends, called to them to hasten and fulfill his commands.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT ADVISES COTTON MILLS

LONDON, July 4.—(AP)—The report of the government committee on the cotton industry, made public today, says that one factor which enabled Great Britain's competitors to oust her cotton manufacturers so largely from the eastern markets has been the competitors' extensive use of short-stapled Indian cotton, while the Lancashire mills kept almost exclusively to the longer stapled but more expensive American cotton.

The committee recommends that the government take every step in its power to urge on Lancashire employers and operators the importance of considering possible means to reduce production costs and to recover a lost export trade in cotton goods.

Certain methods of technical improvement in machinery are suggested, including the use of ring spindles and the introduction of automatic looms.

On the question of amalgamation the committee says that the formation of larger units in the spinning and manufacturing sections of the industry would secure economies in production cost, enable a common policy to be formulated, and provide a basis for co-ordination in production and marketing so as to enable Lancashire again to take the initiative in world markets.

The committee shows in detail the serious export losses, mostly in the Far East. The falling off in India, it says, was due to production of cotton goods there, while Japan was a formidable competitor in the export business.

Referring to methods, the report says that the organization of the Lancashire cotton industry is, with the exception of the finishing section, substantially the same as that which existed in the nineteenth century, whereas Lancashire's successful foreign rivals in world trade have adopted very different methods based on the establishment of closest relations between production and marketing.

"For the manufacture of cheap standard lines in which British goods have been so largely ousted from the eastern markets, extensive use has been made of short-stapled Indian cotton.

"This has hitherto been but little used in Lancashire, where the longer stapled but expensive American cotton has been almost exclusively preferred. In this way her competitors, some of whom have acquired great skill in the mixing of Indian and other cotton with American cotton, have secured an initial advantage of Lancashire by using a cheaper cotton for their manufacturers."

CONGRESS PRINTS CANNON'S RECORDS

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(UN) The stock market dealings of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Southern Methodist church, including a protest by him against receiving telegrams on the market at his Washington office, were formally presented to congress in its closing day.

On request of Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, the Congressional Record today printed a transcript of scores of his stock messages from his correspondence. On request of Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, who has repeatedly criticized the bishop, the Record also published a resolution of Cannon's church conference, denouncing all forms of gambling and specifically warning against stock gambling.

One message, from Kable and Company, Wall Street brokerage firm now closed, to Cannon, said: "Kindly forward $2,000 to bring your account up to date. Thanks." A reply on the same day, December 2, 1927, said: "I certainly regret that we happened to strike such a line of difficult stocks."

A letter from Cannon to H. Goldhurst, a New York broker now in Atlanta prison, apparently referring to some luggage he left, said in a postcript: "Tell the dark-haired damsel to hold on to my portfolio." Another letter to Goldhurst, in April, 1928, advised him to "Tell Al's friends not to count their chickens before they are hatched."

Most of the correspondence dealt with mechanics of the scores of transactions which Cannon had with the firm.

Vice President Calls For Respect for Law

OCEAN CITY, N. J., July 4.—(AP) A call for "reverence" and obedience to the constitution and "all its articles and amendments" was issued today by Vice President Curtis.

Speaking before a gathering of members of the Methodist Episcopal church, the vice president took note of the prohibition issue indirectly in calling for strict enforcement of all laws.

"The constitution of the United States," he asserted, "is the keystone of our national strength, our pride in the hour of prosperity, our consolation and rallying point under every pressure of adversity, and whoever seriously wishes to preserve our constitution in its full purity and vigor must of necessity wish to have all its articles and amendments honestly obeyed and faithfully enforced.

"What we need now more than ever," the vice president said, "is reverence for the constitution and respect for the courts of our country.

"To determine the extent to which legislation is beneficial and beyond which it is hurtful, is the province of statesmanship. While people may differ as to the wisdom of enactment of a particular piece of legislation or as to the amending of the constitution in regard thereto, it is impossible to ignore the constitution and unthinkable to evade it by administrative policy, either national or state."

Mr. Curtis also referred to the London naval treaty and asserted that conference along with the Washington naval conference of 1921; the recent evacuation of the Rhineland; the Kellogg pact, and the Locarno treaty, "all point toward permanent peace."

"That it may come," he added, "is the passionate and lasting desire of the people of the civilized world."

One Officer Slain, One Wounded by Thug

BAYONNE, N. J., July 4.—(AP)—One policeman was killed and another was wounded early today by a man who opened fire on them with a pistol as they stood talking at the intersection of Prospect and Twenty-second streets.

Patrolman Stanley Zenaraski, 27 years old, was killed instantly and his companion, Patrolman Edward Hanak, 32, suffered a bullet wound in the foot.

Police arrested Joseph Rusnik, 427 Avenue F, as a suspect after Hanak said he thought he recognized the gunman as Rusnik. He said he and Zenaraski arrested Rusnik several months ago when they found him carrying a piece of lead pipe.

Rusnik was booked on a charge of homicide after Hanak identified him at the hospital as the man who did the shooting.

In his pockets police said they found 19 cartridges which fitted a gun found in a driveway near the scene of the attack.

Old Jonesboro Recalls History At Celebration

JONESBORO, Tenn., July 4.—(AP) Congressman John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, majority floor leader of the house of representatives, today came back to the hills where he was born and helped this historic town celebrate its 151st anniversary.

He spoke to the thousands who crowded Jonesboro and praised the American pioneers for their fortitude and ideals.

"We shall perform our tasks as well as our forefathers did if we react to the environment of our time as they did to theirs," he said.

"The Indians are gone but other problems arise to take their places. So while we no longer strain our eyes to catch the first sight of the sulking Indian before he used his tomahawk, we must continue to be on guard against other dangers, such as the red anarchist and even the 'parlor pink' who would seek to undermine and destroy our institutions."

It was 150 years ago that a handful of North Carolinians crossed the mountains and builded a town here—the first in Tennessee. A few miles north in Happy Valley the Wautauga Association—the first democratic government in the western hemisphere—was formed. Here John Sevier organized the "lost state of Franklin."

Andrew Jackson practiced law in the log courthouse here and James K. Polk made merry with friends on the spacious porch of Chester Inn. Later David Crockett came here with his famous squirrel rifle "Old Betsy." And Sam Houston had friends in Jonesboro long before he went to Texas. Andrew Johnson worked in a tailor shop not many miles away and came here often before he went to the White House.

Every building, tree and hitching post in the quaint town of 1,000 population was decorated today. The white steeples of churches nearly a century old glistened in the sun light. This and Happy Valley are the sections that gave Tennessee its name of the Volunteer state, and its history was depicted in a pageant.

Mountaineers came down from their cabins, wearing coonskin caps and bearing long squirrel guns that their forefathers used at the Battle of Kings Mountain, to march in the pageant. A 100-year-old canvas-covered schooner had a part as did the famous buggy of "Bob and Alf" Taylor, the two brothers who fought the "war of the roses."

"Jonesboro was 100 years old when I first came here with my father," he said. "I was more impressed with my first view of this town than with all the great capitals I have seen since."

Midshipmen Arrive At Kiel Saturday

U. S. S. FLORIDA, July 4.—(AP) The midshipmen of the United States Naval Academy, en route from Cherbourg to Kiel, aboard the summer practice squadron, celebrated the Fourth of July today in the historic waters of the Kattegat.

A 21-gun salute was fired at noon when the squadron was off the Danish coast at a spot approximately opposite the site of Hamlet's castle at Elsinore.

Turkey and trimmings were served in the mess rooms and deck sports were held. The squadron is due at Kiel early tomorrow morning.

Firefighters Enjoy Quiet, Restful Day

The Fourth of July to the Atlanta fire department was just another day. For a 14-hour period ending Friday night at 10 o'clock only five alarms had been answered by the firefighters, with no substantial damage reported.

A small blaze in a street car called three downtown companies to Washington and Mitchell streets shortly after noon, but little loss resulted. A shorted electric wire was said to have been responsible.

SOVIET SCIENTISTS TO EXPLORE ARCTIC

LENINGRAD, Russia, July 4.—(AP)—A group of soviet scientists, led by Professor Otto Schmidt and including Professor R. L. Somoilovitch, Professor D. U. Wiest and several others, today left for Archangel, where they will embark on an icebreaker for Fridtjof Nansen Land, formerly Franz Joseph Land, to explore its possibilities of development.

The geographical feature, national resources and hunting possibilities of the arctic islands will be thoroughly investigated.

The expedition is equipped with supplies for 15 months. Its members will visit areas upon which no human foot ever before trod. They will explore the Isle of Isolation, in the Kara sea, and a considerable part of the Polar ocean. They will bring radio operators and other technicians to relieve the present scientific staff of the world's most northern radio station, on Nansen island.

The explorers will place upon "North Land," formerly Nicholas II Land, colonists to form a nucleus of a future Russian settlement. These will be a small group of soviet volunteers.

"The soviet government has the greatest sector of polar territory in the world," said Professor Schmidt before his departure. "Therefore there is an international obligation upon us to study this little-known region as thoroughly as possible in the interests of science."

In addition to this daughter and Mrs. Hopkins she is survived by one other daughter, Miss Margaret Cabell, of Chicago; and one son, Charles Ellet Cabell, of Alexandria, Va. The body will be taken to Berryville, Va., for interment.

C.; two aunts, Miss Margaret Ashurst and Miss Lucy Ashurst, both of Atlanta; and two cousins, C. Will and Charles W. Ashurst, both of Atlanta.
